Postmaster at Loveland, Ia., Is Ousted From Job

Mail Official Replaced After Books Are Checked on Advice Furnished by His Former Benefactor.

Ingratitude toward his former benefactor, who made it possible for him to rise from a day laborer to general store proprietor and postmaster at Loveland, Ia., within the short period of two years, is said to have been largely responsible for the re-cent removal of Simon Campbell from that office.

D. H. Bailey, station agent and owner of the elevator at Loveland, is the benefactor who, friends say, was responsible for both the rise and fall of Campbell. When the latter arrived in Loveland, two years ago, Bailey, it is said, gave him a temporary home, sponsored him in his purchase of the general store later and endorsed his candidacy for the position of postmaster.

Later, the story goes, Campbell turned on his erstwhile benefactor, wrote authorities at Washington that Bailey refused to carry mail from the station to the postoffice and that his service in that capacity was un-satisfactory and obtained his dismissal from the position.

Bailey, upon learning of his dismissal, asked for a complete investigation of his own connection with the postal service at Loveland,

The resulting probe was sweep-ing and is said to have disclosed a shortage of $858 in Campbell's books. The postmaster's dismissal followed and Mrs. Ella Spencer was named to replace him.

To add to Campbell's misfortunes, his brother, W. A. Campbell, has filed a writ of attachment against the store, goods and fixtures to cover amounts of money which he claims he loaned the postmaster from time Campbell's friends, howthat he will be able to meet his obligations and that they believe the alleged shortage in his postoffice accounts will be explained.
