"Will we have to climb the fence, or have you the key to Paradise, Pa Cosgrove?" Miss Dean next demanded.

"You'll have to climb, but that ought not to bother you," Pa Cos-grove retorted. "You ought to be able to get over just as well as a bov

"It doesn't bother me," Bess Dean returned, and by the glow of the car lights I saw her adjust the belt of her natty knickerbockers with an air of complacency. "It's poor Madge I'm thinking of, That's a mean climb with skirts on."

"Save your sympathy, little one!" Dicky's voice was tender, but with a gibing note that told me he meant to score a tally against the girl. "That's a trick skirt. Toss it to me, ever improbable it may appear at Madge. I'll carry it over for you." The skirt is one with a single hook at the belt, a row of large buttons fixed by the word "apparently," for down the front. It was the work science is making strides every day of but a second or two for me to which previously appeared to be unloosen it, toss it to Dicky and listed among the "impossible." But, stand ready for any climbing feat in a knicker suit as natty and comfortable as Bess Dean's own,
