

Baron Kato Gives Reasons of Japan For Large Navy

Head of Delegation Says Nation Must Depend on Sea Forces Alone for Protection.

By The Associated Press.
Washington, Nov. 8.—After reiterating that Japan is ready to cut down its naval program in agreement with the powers, provided the safety of Japan is assured, Admiral Baron Tomosaburo Kato, minister of marine and ranking head of the Japanese delegation, proceeded to answer the question: "What is Japan's justification for a big navy?" "Every nation," he told newspaper men, "feels the necessity of self-defense and knows that forces sufficient for self-defense must be provided. The degree depends on many factors and conditions, international and otherwise, and the relations of the country with other powers. "For instance, in the far east Japan occupies an insular position. Should there exist a nation that intends to make an attack upon Japan, it is the naval force alone that can defend our empire. Japan is not self-sufficient. The question of a navy depends upon the point of view of each nation concerned. I do not consider the navy of Japan a great one. The plans already adopted are much inferior to the programs adopted by Great Britain and the United States."

Answers Questions.
Admiral Kato, a frail looking man, who recalls a picture of Marquis Komura, who represented Japan at the Portsmouth peace conference, gave evidence that he is not, in Washington, the man of silence familiar to Tokio. He answered practically all questions instantly. He said he wanted to bring out that Japan's position on naval reductions had been precise and unvaried since he first announced it in Tokio over a year ago and he wanted the American people to understand Japan goes into the conference with the willingness to cut down the so-called "eight-and-eight" program provided agreement with the other powers can be obtained. "The reduction of armaments cannot be done by Japan alone," he added. "The conference doubtless will propose propositions may be made. If they demand the cutting down of our program, we are ready to do so. I want to make it perfectly clear that that is Japan's attitude."

The admiral explained that the eight-and-eight program will be completed in 1928. It was, of course, a continuing program, he added. It had been begun years ago and from year to year appropriations had been made in the Japanese diet to carry the work forward.

Awaits U. S. Proposition.
Somebody asked: "What is the proper basis of armament limitation?" The admiral answered: "I have no doubt a proposition will be made by the American delegates. Therefore I think it is not my place to state our ideas on that subject. I prefer to wait for the American proposition."

To the question: "Have you prepared any counter proposal to the expected American proposition?" he responded: "I have no program to offer, but in accordance with the developments from the American proposal, we may have some suggestions to offer."

Honor Men Leave for Hero Burial

San Antonio, Tex., Nov. 8.—The famous Indian Head, in army records known as the Second division, has sent two honor men to participate in the burial of the unknown American war hero to be interred in the National cemetery at Arlington on November 11. The men, both sergeants, were picked as two of the five non-commissioned men apportioned the duty for the ceremony as body-bearers. The navy and marine corps will be represented by three petty officers. Both men—Sergeants Thomas D. Saunders and James W. Dell—have received the distinguished service medal and the croix de guerre and were chosen for their excellent army records. Saunders is a full-blooded Cheyenne Indian and enlisted from the state of Wyoming, while Sergeant Dell has an army record covering operations in the Philippines, Cuba and the Mexican border. He is one of the crack pistol shots of the army. In the picture the men are shown bidding their commander, Brig. Gen. Edward M. Lewis, goodbye at Camp Travis. Left to right they are: Brigadier General Lewis, Sergeant Saunders and Sergeant Dell.

"Bluebeard" Landru Gets 9 Proposals of Marriage

Frenchman Accused of Murdering 12 Women Is Showered With Love Letters as He Goes to Trial—Fashionable Women Besiege Ushers of Court With Demands for Seats.

Paris, Nov. 8.—The psychological problem of "why do women love bad men?" was brought to the forefront in an extraordinary fashion yesterday. It was revealed at the opening of the Landru trial at Versailles that this "modern Bluebeard," accused of the murder of 12 women, and their subsequent cremation, has received in the last few days no less than nine proposals of marriage, besides scores of love letters and other missives expressing sympathy.

Many of the letters were apparently from women of high society. Philosophers were given further food for thought by the announcement that the ushers of the court have been literally besieged by fashionable women demanding the privileged seats to witness the trial, which, it is expected, will prove the most morbid in the whole amazing history of French crime.

Strange Power.
American news services have received offers of services of many amateur female reporters, it having been reported that though curiosity seekers would not be admitted, the press of the entire world is sending representatives to "cover the trial." The question, "what is Landru's attraction for women?" is likely to be the supreme question at the trial, thousands of Frenchmen eagerly awaiting the revelation of the secret of the Bluebeard's extraordinary powers in order to imitate his conquests.

"If Landru is innocent he should be welcomed by a brass band and a
