THE CURING ROOM

Of the Overland Tire and Rubber Company, located at 30th and Taylor streets, Omaha. The above illustration gives you an idea of the equipment necessary to properly vulcanize automobile tires.

The Overland Tire and Rubber Company in addition to the overhead conveyor track, which transports the tires from the tire building department to the vulcanizing department also employs large cranes to handle the heavy molds. These cranes enable the men to handle the molds quickly and with very little effort.

Curing is practically the last operation necessary to complete the tire for the consumer's use. In the construction of Overland Tires the best of materials—all precautionary measures in application—the most modern equipment—the latest approved handling facilities—and rigid, careful inspection are employed. WHY SHOULDN'T THE OVERLAND TIRE AND RUBBER COMPANY BUILD A GOOD PRODUCT?

We cordially invite and welcome visitors; come in any time and see for yourself the really fine tire building plant we are operating. We are confident that your visit will be a pleasant one.
