

Penitentiary in Illinois to Be Model Prison

Newest Methods of Construction and Sanitation Used in Institution, Which Covers 64 Acres.

Joliet, Ill., Dec. 3.—The new Illinois state penitentiary, a walled city of concrete and brick, is on the final lap of construction, and those in charge now figure that within five years the penal institution will be entirely completed.

The new prison is located at Statesville, near Joliet, and has been viewed by officials of seven European nations, as well as governors and wardens from practically every state in the union.

The prison wall incloses 64 acres. The walls, an innovation in cement construction, loom up 36 1/2 feet in height and extend into the ground from 10 to 20 feet. They cannot be scaled, it is figured, as there are no ledges at the top where hooks or ropes can be fastened. The smooth, gently-sloping sides afford no chances for footholds.

When completed there will be eight cell houses, circular in construction. Two cell houses will be for the "less criminal" and four for those who are under regular prison discipline.

Use Brick and Concrete.
Henry M. Tomlinson, superintendent of construction, was confronted with a unique problem when he started the building of the second cell house. The specifications called for brick walls, with white brick facing. Cost of materials and labor has advanced so far beyond the state allotment for the work that after considerable experimentation it was decided to pour concrete between two walls of brick. This saved 2,000,000 brick and, altogether, cost one-half the amount figured for solid brick construction. All of the other cell houses are being built along the concrete-brick plans.

The prison building proper is in the center of the prison yard and is laid out in a circular fashion, with the dining room in the center and the cell houses circling around it. The cell houses will be connected to the central dining room by means of one-story corridors with basements, making the plans resemble a petaloid flower with the dining hall as its center.

Surpass Hotel Rooms.
The cells surpass in appointments the rooms of many hotels, each having a lavatory, with hot and cold running water, a toilet, an outside window, a steel bed, with ample clean bedding, a table and enameled walls.

In the center of the prison yard is a tower with an underground entrance. From the platform in the tower the guard can look in every cell. He can open a single cell door or all of them from his station and can switch on one light or all lights from the same switchboard. If the inmate is suspected of any irregularity his cell can be illuminated instantly from the central tower, and if some of the prisoners get in possession of firearms and open fire on the guard, a steel shutter can be instantly dropped.

Own Water System.
The prison has its own water system, supplied by two artesian wells. Workshops and a hospital at present are under construction. Before plans were finally drawn, W. Carus Zimmerman, former state architect, made an extensive tour of Europe, visiting ancient and modern prisons.

The "solitary," known in the old prison as "the black hole," is entirely different in design and object of past endeavors. Silence is the punishment meted out for infractions of rules, attempts to escape and other deviations from rules which draw sentences for the convict. In the new solitary there is ventilation, but the walls inside and out are absolutely sound-proof. Not a sound can be heard within that little building. There is a cork linoleum floor, cork walls and an ingenious window shutter which keeps out noise.

When using the fireless cooker, use metal radiators for quick baking and the soapstone for slower burning.

Uncle Sam's Biggest Blimp

The Roma, purchased by the United States from the Italian government, on its trial flight at Langley field, where it was recently assembled after being shipped here knocked down, carries a crew of eight officers and 20 men and is equipped with six 300-horsepower motors. It is the biggest semi-rigid dirigible in the country and has a speed of 70 miles per hour.

Hen on Nest Stripped of Flesh by Lightning Bolt

Winchester, Va., Dec. 3.—A marvelous freak was reported by Mrs. Coleman Lyne, who declared that after lightning had struck a small pear tree near her chicken yard she went out to look after a hen whose eggs were soon to hatch. She found the fighting had run down the fence a short distance to the nest, and there was the skeleton of the hen in the exact position in which she had been set upon the nest.

The bones were as clean as if they had been scraped, and the meat and feathers lay nearby, not even scratched. None of the eggs had been cracked, but on close inspection a small hole was found in the end of each, and the inside of the shell burned out as clean as a new pin.

'100 Per Cent Pure' Husband Had Five Wives; She Says

Los Angeles, Dec. 3.—Prior to his marriage, Isador A. Friedlander held himself out to be 100 per cent pure, but after Mrs. Florence Friedlander had promised to "love, honor and obey" he discovered that her husband had been married five times before.

This she alleged in a suit for divorce filed here. Also she claims that her husband had a habit of

Improved Facilities for Transmigrants in England

London, Dec. 3.—Transmigrants from Europe to Canada and America who travel through England will shortly be housed under ideal conditions while awaiting embarkation from Southampton.

Instead of the temporary accommodation now provided in scattered homes of East London they will in the near future be concentrated in one big camp a few miles outside Southampton.
