

Jack and Jill

"Jack, dear, I want a certain thing the worst way in the world. Will you promise to get it for me?" "How can I tell, Jill, until I know if I can?"

"You should trust me enough to know that I never ask for anything unreasonable. If you don't promise at once I know you don't trust me!"

"Her pretty arms were about his shoulders, as she stood behind his chair at the breakfast table. Who could have resisted them or such logic?"

"Well, that's a different light to put it in. I'll promise. Shall it be the green check mott, or the rising sun?"

"No-o-o! But something just as regular as both of them. I'm so late keeping appointments that I want to reform and always be on the second after this when I am to meet you."

"Fire ahead, dear. Is it a new watch? That very thing of yours is terrible, I know."

"Yes, dear. I want another wrist watch, but a smaller one!"

"Why, Jill-girl, those dinky little things never keep time! Let me get a real one with wheels in it. Everything like this one of mine."

"But that big watch of yours is a man's watch and weighs a ton."

"Shucks! It has room enough in it for a real works. Why, this watch hasn't lost 20 seconds in the last five years!"

"But, Jack, dear, to please me!" "All right, all right, honey. But you see if it isn't just the same as the old one."

"He was soon away on the morning whirl of the city, after a promissory note kind of kiss."

"That evening he produced a bundle from the jeweler—whose name he had advertised on Fifth avenue."

"You big, sweet darling! It's the sweetest little watch I ever saw in my life. I just know I'm going to love it—almost as much as I do you."

"I hope it's as regular in its habits as I am!"

"Nothing daunted by his amused irony, Jill strapped the glittering little watch to her arm, and admired it many times during the evening."

Bank President's Wisdom Shown In Bond Raise

Gold Flows From All Parts Of World Into United States Coiffers—Expect Call Money Drop.

By HOLLAND. The president of one of the larger savings banks of New York is now contemplating with gratification the results of a policy adopted by him some time ago and it was a policy which some of his friends spoke of as rather venturesome. He began to buy Liberty bonds and Victory notes for the bank at the time when the market quotations for these bonds and notes were rapidly falling. That did not dissuade him from keeping up his purchases.

Even when these government securities touched their lowest point in the market he bought heavily although at the time he could not feel certain that the market quotations would not continue to drop.

Profit of Many Thousands. Yesterday he found after investigation that the increase in the market quotations for these bonds had been so rapid and so large that he was able to say to the trustees of the bank that the profit to the bank on these purchases already reached many thousands dollars.

That is a pleasant report, but he has tried to explain to an others how he made of their views, the present day market quotations for these securities prevailed a year ago. Then deflation was causing anxiety. Many of the bankers were buying bonds which they felt compelled to carry. There were many who had and there were many millions tied up in this way.

At the beginning of the year gold had flowed in almost immeasurable quantities from other countries into the United States. This had made it possible for banks to increase their assets by the purchase of gold. At the same time, in many lines of business deflation was causing anxiety. The most business men had been buying bonds and stocks to liquidate their indebtedness to the banks. They wrote off depreciation in their assets.

Some of the banks had secured their rapid liquidation. There came in the spring the first wave of liquidation. It was then that some of those frozen credits had been liquidated. This was a sharp liquidation. That evidence was furnished by the Federal Reserve bank at Boston, which reduced the rate of discount to 4 per cent. This was followed by the action of the Federal Reserve bank in New York, which reduced the rate of discount to 3 1/2 per cent.

The liquidation of the assets of the financial authorities of New York, said for liquidation that he was gratified that high rates charged for call money would continue to be maintained for some time, because the high rate was not continued, but they were not long continued, and it was not long continued. It was not long continued, and it was not long continued.

Brings Pains to Banks. The liquidation of the assets of the financial authorities of New York, said for liquidation that he was gratified that high rates charged for call money would continue to be maintained for some time, because the high rate was not continued, but they were not long continued, and it was not long continued.

Although business and industry have not yet taken the advance which was expected, yet it seems to be the impression that after January 1, industry and business will find it easier to secure funds, because the business outlook will be just what is needed. Furthermore, it is known that some time in the winter of early spring, should conditions remain favorable, several large development plans will be put in operation. Some of these plans are of the nature of a long-term plan, and it is the impression that the enormous surplus of money which is being accumulated in the hands of the government, will be put to use in the form of loans to the business community.

Common Sense. By J. J. MUNDY. The Child and School. Why do you wait until the emergency arises to get ready for it? The child at school plays and wastes valuable time all through the month and falls on examination.

If lessons were learned by this it would not be so bad, but when it goes along month after month and year after year, taking part in all the social and physical stunts and cramming for exams, only to forget what was studied before the report card comes in, a serious condition exists.

Each your children to get a grasp of what is to be expected in the coming month. If the children cannot find out, consult the teacher and make a synopsis yourself and get the idea over in a general way to your child as early as possible in the month.

It can be done and the daily lessons learned as well. Before the month is half gone your child will be reviewing the subject for daily recitation, and will have reviewed it so often as an exam will not be dreaded.

It is worth everything to teach your child how to study. Do not blame the teacher, but set to work yourself to get an understanding of the child's problem and help the child to help himself, later, later, later.

Theater Head Is Indicted for Embezzlement

J. L. Adams Must Answer Federal Charges of Failure To Turn Over War Tax On Admissions.

Des Moines, Ia., Dec. 4.—(Special Telegram.)—J. L. Adams, former Des Moines theater manager, was indicted for embezzlement by the federal grand jury when it submitted its final report to Federal Judge Martin J. Wade. A true bill was also returned against the Adams theater company, of which Adams was president.

Adams is charged with failure to turn over to the federal revenue department approximately $26,000 due as war tax on admissions at his theater. He is now at liberty on bond and will probably be arraigned before Judge Wade Tuesday.

Adams sponsored a summer stock engagement in Omaha last summer, which met with failure similar to his projects in Des Moines.

Financial

The New York Times. By ALEXANDER DANA NOYES. Chicago Tribune-Omaha Bee Leased Wire. New York, Dec. 4.—The rapidity with which the scene has shifted in these markets, with the whole attention of financial observers turning suddenly from the halt in trade reaction to the rise in the stock exchange, from that to the sweeping reduction of money rates, from that to the upward rush of prices for investment bonds and from that to the rapid recovery of the cover in foreign exchange, is a pretty good indication that a great change in underlying economic conditions is under way.

Trade Review

By R. G. DUN & CO. A year which has been marked by slow and uneven economic recovery nearly all over the world has been proceeding in different quarters, but with the exception of the United States, when taking of inventories requires attention to primary conditions, activity has been slow and uneven.
