

Florida Is Seen As Great Farm State of Future

Flagler's Daring Railroad Project Opened Eyes of Others To New Possibilities on East Coast.

By HOLLAND. In company with Henry H. Flagler and Richard H. Edmonds, George W. Perkins some years ago went over the greater part of the "Over the Sea" railroad which Mr. Flagler was then causing to be continued to Key West.

Mr. Perkins was intensely interested in this constructive work and he said, "No one but a man of vision such as characterizes Mr. Flagler and of such vast command over the resources of his own capital could ever have carried out this undertaking; for while we can all now recognize that it is a preeminent success, no banking house in the world would have dared to finance it when it was first projected."

The three companions on that exceedingly interesting journey of inspection lived long enough to rejoice in its completion, but one alone of the three, Mr. Edmonds, is now living. Mr. Flagler lived long enough to realize, although not really to see, the completion of that wonderful engineering work.

All that was accomplished in relation to some of the wonderful plans now under consideration which were made by Mr. Edmonds and which were developed to transportation and to full realization some of the almost incomprehensibly great undertakings of the United States. It may be that as it was with Mr. Edmonds, so it will be with these plans in mind which were completed to rely for the most part upon their own resources.

When he undertook the building of that great railway, Mr. Edmonds was not a wealthy man, but he was a man of vision and of a vision which was not to be dimmed by the vicissitudes of fortune. He was a man of vision and of a vision which was not to be dimmed by the vicissitudes of fortune.

Mr. Edmonds at one time asked Mr. Flagler why he had not been more interested in the development of Florida. His answer, perhaps the first expression of his purposes, was that he felt that he could do more good for humanity in the territory of the east coast of Florida than in any other territory.

Today many thousands of farmers are making a living in the territory of the east coast of Florida. They are making a living in the territory of the east coast of Florida. They are making a living in the territory of the east coast of Florida.

Some citizens of New York are already venturing the cultivation of sugar in Florida. Washington E. Connor, Jr., has established near Daytona, but a substantial amount of sugar is being raised in the territory of the east coast of Florida.

Mr. Edmonds had vision, but he could not command the resources which were needed. He should have had many millions that the amount which he was able to command.

It required the vision of men like Mr. Flagler and Mr. Edmonds, and the command of resources which were needed to command, to persuade bankers who felt that it was worth while to finance great propositions which, if worked out, would make Florida conspicuous among all the states of the United States.

Financial

The New York Times. By ALEXANDER DANA NOYES.

New York, Dec. 17.—The last professional character of the week's movement on the stock exchange was illustrated by today's reactionary market.

One of the professional speculators' traditions is that whichever way he has been operating, he must "cut up" at the end of the week.

The tradition has possibly some warrant in the possibility that good or bad news may come to hand on Sunday, with the stock exchange unable to adjust itself to the situation.

Prices Movement Downward. Today's movement of prices was generally downward, some industrial stocks showing a point or more, but most of the leading stocks were lower.

Foreign Bonds Higher. Nearly all foreign bonds are higher than a week ago, as are most of the United States bonds.
