By P. C. Powell.

As the population increased,

criminals multiplied in proportion.

The doors of the Nebraska penitentiary are closed today to any more inmates. County fails are is found for them in the peniten-

holding convicted men until space,

Scientists and students of criminology have studied and endeavored to find reasons for this criminal

Reasons advanced are varied.

Hereditary weakness, environment, faulty social structure, broken homes, laziness, greed, modern Eves, ignorance, jealousy,

Blames Broken Homes

Warden W. F. Fenton of the Nebraska penitentiary blames broken homes, a desire for easy money

"Probably 50 per cent of the boys in here suffered the loss of a father or mother when young.

or their parents were divorced," he said. "Maybe this condition made them lose family pride, envy other boys, made them unruly threw them

among bad associates or left them facing the world with little education. Any of these can start a boy

"Many go wrong because it looks

State Sheriff Gus Hyers, whose father was a sheriff and later warden of the penitentiary, and who has been chasing criminals himself for years, looks on nearly all

"They may have courage, they may have cunning, they may have fine minds, but they are weak, in like an easy way to get money.

Others are weak-minded."

criminals as weaklings.

phenomena for years.

They include:

and weak minds.

off wrong.

Adam was the first criminal.

simple.

Eve tempted him.

What Makes Men Go Wrong? Adam Blamed Eve; Descendants Blame—?

First Nebraska state prison

Administration building, Nebraska penifentiary

Warden W.J. Jenton, who stamped out drug traffic at the Nebraska state peni-his credit at 46 record of Harry Knight, forger

"Love of excitement put me where I am, asserts Izzie Harris Omahan, suspected of dozen crimes. "I wasn't out long until I took ill. The doctor who attended me gave me drugs for two months until I recovered. I became a 'dope head' and the rest of it is terri-

"Society had a chance to redeem me when I went to the Missouri penitentiary if it really had cared, or if it hadn't been asleep. But they didn't try to cure me of the habit, as they should, and instead dope was used as an incentive to get more work for the prison contractors. "I left the penitentiary as bad a man as when I went in. I was caught again after that Omaha job and sent here. Again society had its chance and failed.

Crazed With Dope.

"The exposures made after our break proved that dope was peddled almost openly. I was crazed in those days. My system was full of dope, my arms were terrible ulcers and then maybe for a day or two the supply would be shut off. It was terrible. I had

"When I came back I faced a They gave me the cure. It nearly tried to kill myself once with a piece of glass and to hang myself another time.

"I was cured, but for years I was nervous, cranky and argumentative. Officers didn't like me. I have a bad prison record. "I deserve a lot and haven't much more to endure as this cough is getting me fast. Yet, I have this to say. If society had taken more interest in prisons years ago I might be a different man today."

Morley's story of attempts to kill himself are substantiated by prison officials.

John W. Barnhardt is 70. He is serving time for forging a $3,000 check at Fremont. Officers have a record of a previous sentence served by Barnhardt for a big forgery in Wisconsin.

Made Easy Money.

"I made easy money all my life," Barnhardt said. "I started as a plantation owner in Arkansas and got to buying race horses. I followed the horses east and became a bookmaker.

"Later I owned a saloon in St. Louis. I sold it because I was afraid of the booze. I gambled for years. Then I lost my pile. I didn't like work, really was ashamed of it, and feared the jibes of my old pals if I did work, so I turned crook."

Robert E. Stode is serving time for forgery. He has numerous jail and penitentiary sentences to his credit, always for the same crime, forgery. "The ease with which a person can forge a check is one reason there are so many forgeries," Stone said. "I can go into almost any department store in America and 'get by' with a forged check. "How many checks have I forged, you ask?

"How many drinks of water have you taken? "I was left alone by death of my parents at 14. At 15 I was vagged' by police in Boston. I was released the next day but that night a man told me how easy it was to forge checks.

"I am a railroad switchman, I never was a bum.

Couldn't Refuse Woman. "But I never could refuse to give a woman what she asked for. "If I didn't have the money, I got it."

Pete Hughes is nearing 60 and is serving his third term for bur-

"I liked it, the thrill of getting into a house and getting out and the wonderful feeling of relief when got out of gunshot distance of the house with the stuff in my pocket," Pete said simply. "I didn't have to steal. I worked on Omaha papers as a printer for years and maybe the friends I made in the early morning hours in the saloon might have been a reason, if there is a reason, that anyone on this earth understands."

Sam (Izzie) Harris is known to every Omaha policeman as a "vag" suspected of a dozen crimes, but convicted of few. He is strictly an Omaha product. Auto thefts and forgeries appear to be his hobbies. He is serving time on the latter charge now.

Love of Excitement.

"My dad used to run a hotel on Thirteenth and Howard streets," Izzie said, "and he died of booze, I guess. I never did work except selling papers. Love of excitement maybe, more than anything else, put me where I am"

Billie Bixler, Central High school boy, Omaha, isn't more than 21, but he has been in trouble for a long time. Auto thefts and petty larceny charges have been placed against him time after time,

"My mother is alone," he said. I was sent to the reformatory. When I came back the Omaha police wouldn't leave me alone and 'vagged' me nearly every time they saw me. I got so I didn't care."

Harry Knight has four prison sentences to his credit at 46 and a wife and two children in Lincoln. Forgeries and small thefts put him in prison every time, except once when at the age of 21 he served time in the Pennsylvania penitentiary on a statutory charge.

He stole the apple and broke the first law of the palm leaf days. The reason Adam went wrong is From that day to the present certain of their descendants have inherited the criminal instinct, or phenomena, which defies the laws made by men and built around the 10 "Thou shalt not" statutes.

Charley Morley, who shot way through life since he was 15, says society could have reformed him.

some way, or they wouldn't take such a chance," Hyers said.

The murderer, officials say, is not an ordinary criminal and he sel-Commits more than one crime Statistics at the Nebraska state penitentiary show that only one murderer who has been released has been returned. Reasons Apparent.

Excepting the holdup man, the burglar or the bootlegger, who shoot in attempting to escape, the murderer is usually a man crazed with jealousy, an insane man or a man laboring under extraordinary emotion. Reasons for their wrongdoing, generally, are apparent.

The same is true of the man who forges a check while drunk, the man who embezzles funds to get an automobile or pay a mortgage, the man who breaks into a store for food and clothing for his fam-They usually go astray once and later become good citizens.

The type that continues to ply the "trade" of forging, "sticking them up," breaking into homes or stealing autos from the days of knee trousers until the end is the Nebraska's penitentiary is full of such men. They also, have reasons for their wrong-doing, and eight of them chosen by officers as 'typical" have told their stories. Shot Way Through Life. First comes Charlie Morley.

John W Barnhardt

o, doing time for lorgery, was ashamed

Morley is a professional noidu man who has shot his way through life from the time he was 15. He is looked upon as one of the most desperate men in the penitentiary. Morley is sole survivor of the trio, which, headed by "Shorty" Gray, killed Warden Delahunty and two other guards and escaped. Gray was killed and Dowd, the second man, shot himself. Morley is serving life.

At the time of the escape he was serving from 1 to 10 years for holding up a drug store at Fortythird and Cuming streets, Omaha, and prior to the Omaha crime he served time at Jefferson City, Mo., for robbery. One eye is gone. It was shot out in a gun fight in Kansas City years ago and the bullet still is in his head.

Morley reads continually. He has taken a course in shorthand and has finished it. He now is taking a correspondence course in engineering. He is 45 and excepting his one brief period of freedom, has been in the penitentiary for 12 years. Warden Fenton says he has developed tuberculosis re-

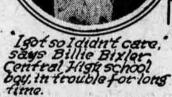

likes thrill of softing into house and out again

"My story isn't a very savory one, but I'll tell it," Morley said. "I was born on a farm in Missouri, which bordered the famous Jesse James farm, When I was a boy, I used to see persons thronging the James farm to look it over and heard them talk in admiring terms of his nerve. Runaway at 14.

"My father died when I was young and I had a nasty, willful temper. I wanted to be 'hardboiled,' and I ran away to Oklahoma at 14. It was the 'wild west' of those days.

celled for months.

"When I was 15 I quarreled with a man over a girl and shot him, He didn't die. Oklahoma was a territory then and the United States marshal took me to Fort Smith, Ark., where I served time in a county jail filled with bootleggers, gamblers and outlaws. The jailer and the fellows in the jail thought it was a good joke to 'put the kid' in a cell with a degenerate negress, with whom I only a few months to serve when we made the break. That in itself would prove I was crazed. life sentence. Warden Fenton had stamped out the dope traffic.

killed me. I wanted to die and

The Married Life of Helen and Warren

Warren Discovers an Unusual on, let's see what we strike along | Wonder where they're headed for?" | unusual place we've found!" Restaurant in a Remote Italian Village.

"All this glorious air-and not a of low stone cottages. The door of from the other end, Pausing before food. Bet we've struck it right off "And why do so many Italian window open!" complained Helen, the living room, opening directly on one of the cottages, they all filed in. the recl. That bunch don't look like women wear black? Those black crowd's out for a good feed." "And they're so dirty you can hardly the sidewalk, disclosed intimate There was no sign, nothing to dissee out of them."

"Well, we're almost there now." Warren peered through the grimy glass that dimmed the sunlit heights for in almost every house the fam- covered wall beyond. beyond. "This dinky little car's got ily sat around a table on which was "I've a hunch that crowd's going side of that living room? Oh, what this!" a lot of power to climb up here." "If the cable should break!" look- hasco of wine.

ing down at the sheer cliffs below. contemptuously. Then glancing seem to hurt 'em—they're husky small and stuffy, with an organ, a 2 big rooster was picking crumbs woman followed with two huge impart her guide book knowledge.

At the long table, the spaghetti, in back, "See how that track snakes up lot." here—these Italians are good engifaally drew up in the market place way.

you what it says," turning to the same low houses and open doorways, view!" Warren selected a table by jewelry?" Helen appraised his three "Environs of Florence."

"Now chuck that guide book! more discouraging.

They started up a narrow street party had turned into the street here where you got rattling good jewelry.

scenes within.

Flesole-an hour's ride from Flor- cheese, and bread shops yawned like side. A drowsy, Sanday-quiet hung "Dear, I don't see anything along Warren, as they went down the steps ing a chicken. On a still lower slope over the square, deserted save for here that looks like a restaurant." some clucking chickens and a dog "We'll keep on till we find one. Now tables.

stretched under the shade of an old that we're up here, we're not going Three of these were being shoved ordering?" Warren was watching the away back to Florence for lunch." together for the party of ten, all party, all talking at once. "That fel-"Dear, this is one of the most an- The next street, the last on the gaily helping. eient Etruscan towns. Let me read mountain top, was lined with the "Jove, here's where you get the

The prospect for luncheon grew the stone railing, overlooking the ornate rings, double watch chain, tinguish it from the other houses. der." "Do they spend all their time eat- Drawing nearer, Warren glimpsed, what's doing." "Guess they're at it all day Sun- Reluctantly, Helen followed into porcelain stove, and a deep fireplace. under a table. "Yes, and the children are beau- There was no one in sight. Foltiful," pausing to watch three dark- lowing the voices and laughter, they wouldn't think they'd wash on Sun-But Helen felt relieved when they eyed babies playing in an open door- came out on a long flight of stone day?"

to the yard in which were several grazed several cows.

whole country beyond. We'll explore for ourselves, Come Hello, look at this bunch! "Dear, this is the quaintest, most buttons,

"Does everything have to be taken this." ing and drinking?" wondered Helen, through the open door, a vine- up and down those steep steep? "They're out for a holiday in all Where's the kitchen? On the other their glad rags. Great guns, look at mop up all that?" as the waitress three, this time with great bowls of the inevitable basket of bread and to feed here. Come on, we'll see a dear!" Helen stooped to pet a down the steps with an enormous friendly puppy. "Got a regular menagerie here." "Doesn't happen to be a cable," day-their one indoor sport, Doesn't the dim, low ceilinged living room- Two cats dozed on the railing, and Helen did not recognize. Another after." Helen was always eager to

"And look at that goat! Dear, you grinned Warren.

steps leading to a garden below, the In the yard further down the of the quaint mountain-top town of Further on, small dingy wine, house being built on the mountain mountain-side, a soiled white goat gravely watched an old woman at a scure restaurant had been discovered anything more." black caverns from the sunny street. "How about my hunch?" exulted wash-tub. Nearby, a boy was pluck- by Americans, the proprietress now

"Wonder what that bunch

low at the end'll foot the bill." "Why do they wear so much conspicuous scarf pin and cuff

"Yes, he's pretty well decked out," shetti, a large bowl of tomato sauce But later, to her amazement, she ing a second joint. "Best chicken A laughing, chattering holiday "Orioli said there was a place up shrugged Warren, who loathed and another of grated cheese.

and inappropriate for a place like tray of relishes-salami, pimentoes, sardelles, and other antipasti that drink-

"That's going to be some party!" "I don't see any menus," worried in a room would have been deafen-Helen. "How're we going to order?" ing, but outdoors it was not unpleas"If we trail that bunch—we won't ant.

approached.

then turned to toss a soiled napkin this was served a wide bowl of over the rail to the washerwoman in pickled green peppers. "Dear, we mustn "That's what you might call esti--it's awfully rude."

one of the tablecloths on the line

Shouts of approval from the long

Helen had thought the cold meat
table greeted neaping plates of spawould be followed by the dessert.

I like to watch that bunch eat."

"Jove, that's the real Tuscan Nex table greeted neaping plates of spawould be followed by the dessert. one of the tablecloths on the line I like to watch that bunch eat."

"If they eat all that-they won't come. want anything eise." "Don't you believe it.

"Did you get any of this tunny?" Helen was mincing over the anti- Been teasing their appetite-now pasti. "And what are these curious they're getting down to business. little fish?" "Holy smoke, are we expected to placed before them a half gallon, The proprietress was now coming grass plaited fiasco of wine. "Oh, this must be one of the places where you pay only for what you measure it before and At the long table, the spaghetti, in mouth-defying forkfuls, was being rapidly dispatched. The loud chatter

Surprised and pleased that her obproached.
"Antipasti," ordered Warren, nodWarren. "See what's coming now!" ding at the variety on the large plat- Down the steps came the two wo-

"Dear, look, they've eaten all of

"Dear, we mustn't watch them so found the main course was yet to I've had for a blue moon.

carrying trays of boiled chicken, wine! After all that I shouldn't next trooped down the steps. "Told you they'd just started in.

Warren was enjoying it hugely. Once more the procession of vegetables-string beans, mashed potatoes and spinach.

"How can they?" amazed Helen. "They'll all be sick. "Not that crowd. Wouldn't want to feed 'em under contract. We'll cut the cold meat and 16 vegetables gorge. -but that chicken looks mighty

Then you mustn't eat any more of this," pushing away the spaghetti Warren had ordered. "You neyer feel well when you eat too much at

"It's different over here-you can stand for a lot more grub. Signora," to the proprietress, "Duno pollolike that," indicating the broiled men bearing great dishes of cold "We're through with this." Helen "Si, si!" Beamingly she started off, meat—sliced beef and lamb. With motioned for her to take the platter. Disappointed that they had not eaten more, she removed the

But with evident pride, she later ciency." laughed Warren. Hey, "Huh, they're having the time of there!" at the goat that was nibbling their lives—don't know we're here. chicken—here was something they gun up the star places to feed!"

"They're going to have salad. The two women and the boy, each too," dismayed Helen. "And more think they'd want to eat for a week. "If they had to pay New York prices for that feed-they couldn't afford to eat for a week!" When the empty salad bowls were finally removed, baskets of fruit and a generous mould of cheese were

"That Gorgonzola looks fine-just about ripe. We'll have to fall for that." "No-no, we don't want another thing," protested Helen. "It's taken away my appetite just to see them then served to the insatiable party.

But Warren insisted on having an order of cheese. "Well, this is what I call pretty slick," when later, sipping his coffee, he propped his feet on the railing leaned back in well-fed content "I'll bet not many tourists ever gee to this place." "Dear, no one but you could have found it." always ready to play up to his egotism over locating restau-"Takes me to spot 'em, eh?" gloat-ingly. "I'd a hunch we'd land something good if we followed that in your bally old guide book. Dig Copyright, 1921, by Mabel Horbert Harper. Next Week-Another Adventure in