Things You'll Love To Make

Little Girl's Ribbon Trimmings Smock

Here is a simple but smart-looking little girl's ribbon trimmed smock. Cut the smock after any plain slip-over pattern. Scallop the sleeves and edge as shown. Bind all the scallops, or trim them with ribbon. Make two slits in each scallop, each a little longer than the width of the ribbon that is to be used as the girdle. Buttonhole these slits with metal thread, silk or worsted. Run the ribbon through the slits and tie at one side. Slit the upper part of the smock and run through them narrower ribbon of the same shade as the girdle. With a pointed skirt this little girl's ribbon trimmed smock makes a sweet frock.

Recompense

This guerdon has the nameless soldier won. Above his wept-for comrades glorified; Ten thousand fathers speak of him with pride, Ten thousand mothers breathe, "This was my son." -Mabel J. Bourquim.

Household Hints

Fruit stains on linen should be smeared with glycerine and left for about an hour, then wash the stains in warm, soapy water; repeat the process if necessary. Soak one-half cupful tapioca overnight in cold water. In the morning add sweet whole milk, a beaten egg, pinch of salt and a handful of seedless raisins, with a very little sugar. Cook in double boiler until clear.

It is well for one not to try to do too much each day. To do what one can with ease and to let the rest go without quibbling or misgivings of any type will brighten many days in many lives.

Hubby Can Blame Gay Maclaren

Probably 800 wives gave impatient or wondering husbands the same excuse for being late at dinner last night. "It was so entertaining, I couldn't believe it was 6 o'clock when I heard the whistle. We were packed in so tight I couldn't get out without causing a big disturbance, and, really, I did want to know how it all came out."

A week before attracted by the size and quality of some peaches offered for sale by a farmer on the way to Kingston, I had ordered three baskets to take home with me. If we took them on the luggage carrier of the car I was driving it would mean the transfer of the bags to the body of the car, and consequent inconvenience for Lillian in confining Junior to the seat. I had planned to keep the floor of the tonneau absolutely free, that the restless child might have the chance to move around. And I was afraid Dicky would never consent to halt long enough for me to arrange the baskets in the car he was driving, so that there would be no danger of their spilling and consequent spoiling.

"What! I didn't tell you to shake the daylight out of me," he retorted, turned his face to the wall as he spoke, evidently preparing to go to sleep again. "Aren't you going to get up?" I asked in as mild a tone as I could manage. "Of course I'm going to get up when I'm good and ready," he growled. "Run, along out of here and let me alone."

There was no such luck in store for me, however. I drew up to the farmhouse gate, and after sounding the motor horn vigorously for several seconds with no response, alighted from the car as Dicky drove up and stopped, regarding me in wrathful amazement. "What's the big idea?" he demanded. "Going to make a farewell call?"

I explained apologetically, then made a timorous query that he take out the suitcases and let me repack the tonneau of the car he was driving.

Problems That Perplex

Answered by BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Is Father Right? Dear Miss Fairfax: I am a 22-year-old doctor's daughter, and I came to you because I want a disinterested opinion of my perplexing problem.

To suit my father, I should have been his son. Since I was not, I have taken a son's place with him, and we have been the closest of pals. Knowing that he would always oppose my marriage makes me want your advice.

Daddy has always been very critical of my men friends. And now my Prince Charming is receiving his share and additional criticisms, and I am in a whirl of despair as to my duty.

My friend is 24 years of age, a college graduate, from a very good family and is now in business with his father. All this is well and good, and Daddy sees no grievance. But Daddy thinks the man has a past, as he was in the navy, and has confessed to me that he was intoxicated once. Daddy says it is an index of his character.

I have told my friend frankly all the doubts my father has of him, but he pleads for a chance to prove his mettle. We have gone together for a year and if I can win Daddy over I plan to be married in six months. Otherwise I must be convinced that this is not my prince after all. In that event I will give up. BEWILDERED.

Either your father knows more than he has told you or he is a bit resentful toward the man who would take his daughter from him. Why not let it up to you to find out. Your father is evidently educated, refined and affectionate. I believe it will be fair with you. Go to him and ask him for more evidence against the young man's character than merely that he was in the navy. The best manhood of our country served in the army and navy the past few years. Your lover's intention is gratifying, but if that is all and he has made frank confession of it, and he may be all the stronger for it, then why does he come through temptations honorably as a better man than the one who has never tested his most strenuous duty to Daddy for a square deal. Your last sentence puzzles me. You seem surprisingly willing to give the man up.

Brown Eyes and Blue Eyes: I think you are not too young to go with boys once in while. Why not minutes' conversation after return from a dance or party is quite natural, but it should not be prolonged if it will be late. Please don't use rouge. A girl 18 ought to have a fresh complexion without it. I don't object seriously to powder, though I do think the most beautiful complexion is the natural one. You should weigh about 120 pounds. Wear your slits long enough so you will not be embarrassed.

Troubled: A girl can "get rid" of a boy's company in a simple and successful manner. Maybe you are one of that class of girls who try to act indifferent and smart and yet keep a man dangling. Just don't accept any invitations from him if you don't want to go with him. He probably won't try to lasso you and drag you out if you even if she is wrong about your going with boys. I have a sneaking suspicion your mother is right and that you are a girl wrong in the matter. Why not trust her judgment for a few years yet. It is very young. I prefer the simple ways of doing the hard thing to the more complicated style for you without knowing more about how you look.

Mrs. Rita Bust of Albion, Neb., would like information regarding knitting machines. Any letters sent to me containing address on the kind to buy will be forwarded to her, or they may be sent directly. Replying to your letter to me, Mrs. Bust, I can discuss the relative merits of firms in these columns, and I do not know anything personally about these machines, never having used one. I am hopeful, however, that someone who has had experience with them will write to you.

Anxious Trio: It seems to me I would be a little slow to again accept an engagement with boys who ran away and left me. I would let them apologize, if they wish to, and I would accept the apology and would be subject myself a second time to the humiliation of being deserted by the gallants at the church steps.

Diaper: Write to the state adjutant of the American Legion, Santa Fe, N. M., for the address of the hospital for disabled soldiers. I think it would be all right for you to write to the disabled soldiers, if you have good sense. Don't write with the idea of "getting a fellow," but rather with the purpose of cheering some lone some boy who has been disabled through service to his country. I would not advise you to exchange photographs unless you contain information on the kind to develop, depending upon the interests and education of each of you.

There is nothing in the world quite so nourishing or helpful as Scott's Emulsion for thin, anemic girls of "teen-age." It is well-worth trying.

audience at the Fontenelle hotel Tuesday afternoon. The program began at 4 o'clock and closed shortly after 6. Unfaded, Miss Maclaren gave the entire play, impersonating the 11 characters of the cast. Mrs. R. Beecher Howell, who saw Lynn Fontanne in the title role in New York, said Miss Maclaren gave a faithful interpretation of the well-known actress. Omaha theatergoers who remember Gregory Kelly as he appeared here at the Boyd theater in "Seventeen" two seasons ago, recognized him at once by Miss Maclaren's skillful imitation of his voice. "Dulcy" is a comedy in spite of Dulcy herself, who, full of common sense, but always well-intentioned, bromides and blunders through the three acts of the drama. "I have always said, 'If there is a breeze anywhere, we get it in this room.' " "Arranging flowers is quite a knack."

"I'm never myself until I have had a cup of coffee in the morning. I don't know how to play bridge well, but I really love the game. And that's all that matters." These are typical Dulcians. But, as someone has suggested, if there were no Dulcies in life, there would be no conversation.

New Management for Day Nursery Formally Announced.

Miss Gertrude Stout and Mrs. Glen Wharton attended the regular monthly meeting of the Day Nursery board Monday forenoon to formally announce the decision of the Junior league to take over financial responsibility for the nursery on next June 1. Mrs. E. S. Westbrook presided. It is uncertain as yet whether the league will take over active management of the nursery until October. Four new members were elected to the board of directors to serve until the league does take over the nursery: Mrs. Edgar Morsman, jr.; Mrs. Charles L. Platt, Mrs. Glenn Wharton and Miss Gertrude Stout. Fifty dollars were contributed to the Day Nursery by the telephone operators who held a Christmas bar last month. This money was a part of their bar profit. There are five operators who leave their babies at the nursery every day while they are at work. A go-cart is badly needed at the nursery, according to Mrs. Alvin Johnson, one of the members of the board. One mother brings her two children each morning and they are too small to walk.
