Developing of Sulphur Deposits Poser to Company

the Texas company are seeking an answer. This corporation is in pos-session of deposits of sulphur which can now be made of commercial avail through the utilization of processes which were invented a few years ago. But the Texas company, if there be truth in prevailing reports, does not care to become a producer of sulphur. Its oil properties are to far-reaching in magnitable that the managers of the com-the sulphur mines elsewhere in the world and, furthermore, cnabling us to export this raw material made possible a record of yearly gains upon an investment in another company which is without any procedent in the United States or elsewhere. When Frasch perfected his invention and secured an option upon land in Louisiana beneath which were deposits of sulphur which had theretofore frustrated all attempts to make it available, he-visited New York, hoping to secure capital, not more than $400,000, with which to develop these deposits. But his search for capital was wearisome and of no avail until at least he met Hamilton McK. Twombly, who said that he would invest $180,000 in the enterprise. Some years later Chauncey Mr. Depow, when speaking of this investiment made by Mr. Twombly, said that Mr. Twombly told him that he had made many unprofitable ventures after scrupulous investigation, but this time he made the investment with his eyes shut. After Mr. Twombly's death the discovery was made that this investment of $100,000 was the most fortunate of any in which Mr. Twombly had shared. It was yielding him and afterwards yielded his estate apploximately $800,000 a year. His initial investment of $100,000 was the most fortunate of any in which Mr. Twombly had shared. It was yielding him and afterwards yielded his estate apploximately $800,000 a year. His initial investment of $100,000 so fortified Mr. Frasch with encouragement that he was able to continue his search for capital and at last secured the needed amount.

Harmful for Sicily.

Not long after, melted sulphur began to be pumped to the surface in continuous streams and the United States became independent of Sicily so far as sulphur was concerned. This was a misfortune for Sicily for upon her sulphur exports to the United States she depended for the chief part of her income. Apparently later arrangements were made whereby Sicily was permitted to control certain markets. The discovery of gold in California and of rich deposits of copper in the Roky mcuntains and southwestern sections of the country are matched, not by discovery of sulphur (for these deposits were long ago known to exist in Louisiana and Texas), but by a discovery made by science and invention of a method by means of which these deposits could be made commercially available.

Even at the time when the first orsenance company, whose capital was only $100.00 and second of operations in Louisions, there was knowledge that deposits in sulphur lay beneath the surface, but so far below, perhaps 2.000 feet, as 16 panels and upon which stood the soldiers' home.
