Several Omaha maidens are to attend proms at eastern colleges this winter. Miss Dorothy Johnson will be the guest of the breakfast Summer at Dartmouth for the winter carnival there. She will go east with Mrs. Luther Kuntze and Miss Gertrude Kuntze, who is also going to Dartmouth as the guest of James Moody of Cambridge, Mass. The carnival at Dartmouth lasts for four days, days full of skiing, snowshoeing and tobogganing, with a dance every night. Miss Johnson and Miss Kuntze are to have an unusual experience, for the evening they arrive they are to leave their train at White River Junction, where Mr. Moody and Mr. Summers will meet them with a sleigh, and they will have a five-mile sleigh ride over to Dartmouth.

Both girls declare they will be faithful to the much-maligned but necessary gals during their snowy entertainments.

Miss Helen Rogers, who is in her freshman year at Vassar, plans to go to Anherst next month for her prom and house party. She will be the guest of Marion Adams of Omaha.

Miss Mary Moran of Bryn Mawr will spend the treasured vacation following mid-year examinations on a house party in Montclair, N. J., where she will be the guest of a former schoolmate at St. Timothy's.

Problems That Perplex

Assured by BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Billy Speaks. Dear Miss Fairfax: In answer to your publication under date of January 15, entitled "A Hit Feastin'it" and signed by some one else being self an old maid, will just say she has named herself well. Now she means going with a fellow a year with out the bother of having a coming up. That is proof that they didn't care for each other. If a fellow is not allowed a kiss or to hold a hand after long acquaintance, you blame him for not continuing to call?

Why do people marry? Is it just to have some one help you spend your money and make you take a back seat or is it to have some one to help share your sorrows as well as your happiness? Why does this girl want to be sought after by all the boys in town and offer nothing but a cold thank you? After a boy has spent his entire wages for one night, then she wants another fellow's wages the next night. If you expect everyone to love you, you must at least look pleasant once in a while. She says she is a good dresser. That means nothing to a man unless he is paying for it. Dressers are only to make other women jealous.

Why are you quite eloquent, Billy. Sympathy, understanding and sincere regard are great things in this old world, but promiscuous kissing is not a sign that one possesses them. On the contrary, it proves a lack of sincerity at least.

To the Widow. Dear Miss Fairfax: I see in your columns a request for advice by a widow lady and feel that perhaps what I think about it after having been over the road might help her, so you think it worthy print it.

Most of us at some time or other live as if we were to make a decision as to what our future shall be. I made my choice by keeping my two children with me and doing work which only pays a little over what our clothes cost. At first I took work that paid well, but when it came to me that I had to do it at my own home, I turned out of my keeping and this, as all mothers know, does not work well, so I came to the country where I get less than one-third offered for work similar to the other town position, but while it has its disadvantages, still the big thing is you have the children with you.

You spoke of raising chickens. At this place for the past two years I have raised chickens on hives and realized quite a help from them when winter clothing was to be bought.

If I had it to begin over, I would do one thing different. I would hire out to some man in a large enough place where if the children went to school I could take a business course or attend night school and have the use of a public library. One thing more; if you should hire out as a housekeeper make sure they want you the year around.

Most farmers don't care to pay through the winter, for at that time their work is light, and they would just as soon "batch" but if you want to stay for your board, you're welcome. Sincerely, ANOTHER RESPECTABLE WOMAN.

Blue Eyes. Don't try to put 80 candles on a cake. Let each candle represent 10 years and use eight of them. Other candles in pretty candlesticks may represent the decorations if you wish. I would suggest a white frosting for the cake. Buy little candleholders designed for use on top of a cake.

Amorous. Write to the attorney general, Des Moines, Ia., and ask him the question you have asked me. It is a subject regulated by law.

Things You'll Love To Make

Corded and Inlaid Hangings

Corded and inlaid hangings are stunning over plain net curtains. Use a light-colored silk for the upper part of the side drapes, for the cordings and inlays. Use a darker shade of silk or velvet for the valance and borders. Cut out of the borders and valance squares about five inches on each side. Cover some cable cord with bias strips of the lighter-colored silk. Turn back a small edge around each square, and bind with the covered cord. Edge the valance and bands, top and bottom, with the cord. Join the squares with zig-zag lines of the cord as shown. Set a square of the lighter-colored silk under each cut-out square. Place the darker border over the light silk so that the light silk forms a lining for the bands. Line the valance with the lighter-colored silk. These corded and inlaid hangings are exquisite on living room windows.

My Marriage Problems

Adele Garrison's New Phase of "REVELATIONS OF A WIFE"

The Way Madge "Translated" Katie. Mr. Ticer. From the kitchen, as I neared it, came the sound of feminine voices—Katie's shrill and rapid, Mrs. Ticer's deep and measured.

"I certainly am not anxious to help you," I heard Mrs. Ticer's voice say calmly as I reached the door. "I would not have come in here at all, but old Mrs. Graham asked me to get supper. I supposed you were still in bed, where you've been for three days."

"I am afraid my children's play would alarm Mrs. Underwood," she said sweetly. "I find so few children who can enter into it."

He blew into the measure. Then he snorted and drew back. And if Johnnie Green hadn't been spy Twinkleheels would have given him the slip.

Johnnie Green hurried to the pasture. At his first whistle Twinkleheels pricked up his ears. He had come to think only of one thing when the whistle sounded in the pasture. That one thing was oats.
