Oldest Masonic Lodge Member Given Medal

William J. Connell.

The "Jordan medal," struck in honor of the first grand master of Masons in Nebraska, was presented to William J. Connell, as the oldest living member of Capitol lodge, No. 3, A. F. & A. M., at its last meeting.

R. C. Jordan, from whom the medal takes its name, was junior warden of Capitol lodge when he was made grand master of the state. The lodge is the oldest in Nebraska, although not in number.

William J. Connell was made a Mason in Omaha in 1870, and early in the 90s was made a life member because of services to the institution. Lewis E. Smith of Long Pine, grand master of Masons in Nebraska, made the presentation address when the medal was given to Brother Connell, and congratulated the veteran as well as the younger members of the lodge on the occasion.

Mr. Connell, who is also pastor of the bar of Douglas county, is with John Lee Webster, the only survivor of the list of 50 lawyers, who comprised the local bar association when he was admitted to practice in Omaha in 1871.

Jewish Welfare Body Will Hold Annual Meeting

Sum Double That of Any Previous Year Collected in 1921 for Local Work.

The Omaha Jewish Welfare federation will hold its annual meeting and election of officers in the ball room of Hotel Fontenelle this evening.

This organization was formed by Dr. C. D. Spivak of Denver, "the best federation in the country." It now has a membership of 1,200, almost twice as large as that of the preceding year.

Under leadership of Harry Lapidus, chairman of the finance committee, 130 men and women, many of them never before active in communal work, obtained pledges totaling more than $45,000 last year, a sum more than twice as large as any ever raised before for local Jewish work.

Twelve purely local and seven national institutions are now cared for by the federation. Since last May, Omaha's Jewish social work has been carried on with money contributed exclusively by Jews.

No funds were solicited at the meeting tonight, at which there will be a full program and to which every Jewish citizen is invited. Reports will show how many orphans, widows, aged and poor persons have been cared for by the federation.

Benefit Masque Ball to Be Held

Proceeds of Event Will Aid Needy Ex-Service Men and Families.

Everybody enjoys a masquerade, with its music, brilliant costumes, freedom from restraint and subtle air of mystery.

What promises to be one of the most successful social events of the season is the big benefit masque ball to be given under auspices of the Woman's auxiliary of the American Legion in the Burgess-Nash tea room the night of February 11. This is the first masquerade to be given in Omaha by a large organization for several seasons.

Proceeds of the ball will be used to aid needy ex-service men and their families.

"The majority of Omahans do not realize there are hundreds of ex-service men in actual need," said a member of the auxiliary. "Their families are sometimes almost starving when found by the legion and their names turned over to the Women's auxiliary. In the most cases they are too proud to ask help, but go to the legion, as they formerly went to their old buddies of the army days, and ask a loan."

It is not necessary to appear at the masquerade in fancy costume, the committee in charge announces, but every person on the floor must be masked until 10, when the masks will be removed. Prizes will be awarded for the most handsome, the most original and the most unique costumes. Cards and a special program will be provided for those who do not dance.

Tickets will go on sale next Wednesday and may be had from any member of the Women's auxiliary or at Legion headquarters at the court house.

With all the equipment of Russian manufacture a radio station is being built at Moscow that will be in direct communication with all the large stations in the world.

Mary Louise Speculates

I HAVE been "supposin'." I find it's an excellent indoor game for the dull days between midwinter and the first bud and bird note of spring. I just love to watch the snow as it tumbles silently past my window, and dream about all the things it covers—all the wonderful schemes of nature—too intricate, too wonderfully simple for our own minds to grasp—and the confident, serene way in which she carries them out. Snow-covered fields and hills always suggest calmness and peace to me—I know that under the white blanket the fairies of spring are preparing the glorious world for the approach of another summer. So—

"All Wrapped Up"

In the present need not mean unkind of coming spring. Warm furs and snugly coats are no more suggestive of spring than the snows and winds themselves; but they are suggestive of shopping trips—and once in the shop, no amount of snow, fur, ice and wool hose can longer obscure the coming of spring.

Alive!

I slipped into The Brandeis Store through the twentieth street entrance, and found myself in the midst of the big ready-to-wear departments. Just a glance around convinced me that the spirit behind these impressive displays keeps a sensitive finger on the pulse of fashion.

Palm Beach Things

Riotous in coloring, cut in styles as unrestricted in silhouette as the spirit of pleasure in this happy sea-side resort. Things that may—or, worse luck, may not—cast a tell-tale suggestion of the fashion trend for spring. Palm Beach fashions are individual, in the high-handed sort of way that denotes no heritage from dying winter, and by the same token, bequeaths no legacy to fashions of spring.

Whispers

Fashion struggles already to throw off the cloak of winter—and pretty little whisms are already creeping into necklines, trimmings and sleeves in the new frocks—whims, which, a month ago, were undreamed of. Sleeves particularly are things of surprising beauty and offer a fertile field for the expression of new ideas. They have, in many of the models, appropriated an extravagant amount of materials. Flowing sleeves will crop up are faced with bands of satin or crepe de chine. Others are suggestive of pretty capes, wide and very short with flaring cuffs, and some, if you don't keep an eye on them, will creep down the arm and fasten a slender cuff about the wrist.

Look Out!

Hem lines will bear watching. I've been thinking for a long time that they had just about furnished all the thrills of which they are capable, but since fashion knows no rule and recognizes no precedent, there's no telling what the capricious hem line will do. Below their present station are any number of pleasant stopping places—the point known as "The Shoe Top" in the old days when shoes had tops, is a graceful and convenient length, though it is possible the ankle lengths with which Paris has threatened—or promised—for half a season, may yet make their appearance.

One Thing Certain

They won't go much farther up. The short skirt has a dangerous rival in the new knickers which are being rather well received and are taking advantage of their popularity to appear in all sorts of places. They have not yet had the sang-froid to appear at afternoon and evening affairs, but for sports and school wear they are indispensable.

Chapeaux

Hats for wear with the earliest spring costume may be chosen for harmony of idea as well as color. The aptitude tulle dress of Canton crepe chooses its own rather large hat of soft straw, whose crown is adorned with ribbons and rose silk embroidery. The youthful wearer of a rather bouffant taffeta frock may toss her bobbed curls under a crushable off-the-face hat of cerise ribbon.

Let It Snow!

Late winter is made for only one thing. That is to get all ready for spring. And the white nature is working, training the buds and blossoms in manners, so they'll know just what to do when they come out. The Brandeis Store corps of buyers are just as busy assembling all the new frocks, coats, and hats we are going to need for the days when winter gives up the struggle.
