

Bond Clothing Company Buys Lease in Omaha

Acquisition of Merchants Hotel Property Is Largest Downtown Real Estate Transaction of Year.

The Bond Clothing Company, with a chain of 14 retail clothing stores throughout the country, has taken a long-time lease on the storeroom at 1514 Farnam street, formerly occupied by the Townsend Gun company. Alterations are now in progress, the opening date being set for March 15.

Year's Largest Transaction.

In addition the bond company took a 95-year lease on the Merchants hotel site adjoining, where they contemplate the erection of a new mercantile establishment when present leases expire, four years hence.

The two leases represent what is probably the largest real estate transaction in downtown property in the last year.

It was negotiated by the H. A. Wolf company, representing the Overland Realty company, owners of the Merchants hotel lease.

C. A. Bond of New York, president of the Bond Clothing company, is in Omaha to personally complete negotiations for the leases and letting contracts for a new front and other improvements to be made under the direction of John and Alan McDonald, architects.

Ex-Mayor of Columbus.

Bond was formerly mayor of Columbus, O., and is active in republican politics in the east.

"I see great commercial prospects for Omaha," said Bond. "I have long desired to open up in this city and was only waiting for a favorable location to be made available," he said.

Omaha is the farthest western branch of the Bond company, except for Kansas City. The concern manufactures its own brands, which are exclusive popular-priced men's clothing.

The Townsend site includes two stories and basement space.

Tangier Shrine Band Serenades Rotarians

Nearly 200 members of the Omaha Rotary club attended the regular noon luncheon at the Hotel Rome yesterday.

James Fitzgerald, Woodmen of the World official, spoke eloquently on the aims and ideals of the Rotary club. His message was directed primarily to new members.

Rotarians who had joined the club during 1921 were called on to give one-minute talks on their respective businesses.

During the luncheon the club was serenaded by the Tangier Temple Shrine band, which marched into the dining room carrying banners, advertising the Shrine circus to be given in the Auditorium next week.

Mrs. Armstrong Held Innocent of Charges

Mrs. Francis Armstrong, Benson, was awarded an absolute divorce and the custody of her 3-year-old child, Maxine, by District Judge Wakeley yesterday.

Mrs. Armstrong is to receive $25 a month alimony and one-half of the Armstrong property. She is employed at the Union Pacific railroad and receives $70 a month.

Charges brought against Mrs. Armstrong, in which the name of Howard Hutton, bank cashier, was mentioned, were disregarded by the court.

"There was not one bit of evidence to show that Hutton had been intimate with Mrs. Armstrong," said the judge. "I think she can be relied upon to care for the child."

SLEEPY-TIME TALES THE TALE OF PONY TWINKLEHEELS BY ARTHUR SCOTT GALLEY

CHAPTER XI. Bright and Broad.

Farmer Green had a yoke of oxen called Bright and Broad. They were huge, slow-moving fellows, as different from Johnnie Green's pony, Twinkleheels, as any pair could be.

"We can't deny it," they chanted. They never frisked about in the pasture. They never ran, nor jumped, nor kicked. They seldom ever trotted. And when they did move faster than a walk, they lurched into a queer, shuffling swing.

The first time Twinkleheels saw them traveling at that gait, he couldn't help giggling.

"They look as if their legs were going to knock down all the fence posts on the farm," he exclaimed.

Despite their clumsiness, Bright and Broad did many a day's hard work in an honest fashion for Farmer Green. Of course he never drove them to the village when he was in a hurry. But, whenever there was a heavy load to pull, he depended on Bright and Broad to help him. If the pair of bays couldn't haul a wagon out of a mud hole, Farmer Green would call on Bright and Broad. And when they lunged forward against their yoke, the wagon just had to move—or something broke.

Though Twinkleheels admired their strength, he didn't care much for Bright and Broad's company. They were too sober to suit him. They were more than like to stand and chew their cud, and look out upon the world with vacant stares and say nothing.

"I used to think Ebenezer was a slow old horse," Twinkleheels remarked to the bays on a winter's day, as they stood in the barn. "I thought I could beat him easily until he showed me that I was mistaken. But I can certainly beat Bright and Broad. They're the slowest pair I ever saw."

The bays glanced at each other. "You can't always tell by a person's looks what he can do," one of them remarked. "Let Bright and Broad choose the race course, and they'd leave you behind."

"Nonsense!" Twinkleheels cried. "They couldn't beat anybody unless it's Timothy Turtle, who lives over in Black Creek."

The bays winked at each other.

over the low partition that separated their stalls.

"Maybe you'll find out that you're wrong," they told Twinkleheels. "Maybe you'll learn that Bright and Broad are faster than you think they are. We've known Farmer Green to take them and leave us here in the barn—when he was in a hurry to go somewhere too."

"Hal hal!" Twinkleheels laughed. "You're joking. I'm trying to fool me."

"Oh, no!" the bays cried. "Ask Bright and Broad themselves."

So Twinkleheels spoke to Bright and Broad the very next day when he met them in the barnyard. While he told them what the bays had said to him, they chewed their cud and listened with a dreamy look in their great mild eyes.

Twinkleheels paused and waited for them to speak. But they said nothing. Their jaws moved steadily as they chewed; but they said never a word.

"Can't you answer when you're spoken to?" Twinkleheels cried at last.

"Yes," they said, speaking as one—for they always did everything together. "Yes! But you haven't asked us a question."

"Is this true—what the bays told me about you?" he snapped.

"We can't deny it," they chanted. "Twinkleheels was never more surprised."

A Silly Song By A. CUCKOO BIRD.

The ground hog is an ancient myth in which I once believed. But, by that boobytailed false alarm no more I'll be deceived. In days of old, when shone the sun and he his shadow saw, I ordered 10 more tons of coal, my kitchen stove to thaw. But when the sky was overcast, and he stayed out all day, I'd ailsy throw my overcoat and old felt boots away. I'd resurrect my old straw hat, and don my B. V. D.'s, and stick it out for six long weeks and let my carcass freeze. I'd spend the merry month of March inhaling noxious pills, and toil through April, May and June to pay my doctor bills. He'll never fool me any more. Too often I've been froze, by trusting in his judgment and shedding all by clothes. I'll bet, when he's stayed out all day, he hikes for home in glee, and chuckles to himself and says, "What fools these mortals be."

Mrs. I. Kulakofsky, 31 Years in City, Expires

Mrs. Israel Kulakofsky, for 31 years a resident of Omaha, died yesterday at Presbyterian hospital, after a three days' illness. She was 52.

Her husband, six children, Mrs. David Goldswart, Dr. Barney Kully, Hannah, Hermann, Fannie and Berneice Kulakofsky; a sister, Mrs. Ben Reinschreiber, and three brothers, Nathan and Harry Rubin of Omaha, and I. Rubin of Los Angeles, survive her.

Funeral services will be held at 2 today from the home, 2105 South Tenth street. Rabbi H. Grodinsky and Morris Taxon will officiate. Burial will be in the cemetery of Beth Hamedrosh Hagadol synagogue.

"Hal hal!" Twinkleheels laughed. "You're joking. I'm trying to fool me."

"Oh, no!" the bays cried. "Ask Bright and Broad themselves."

So Twinkleheels spoke to Bright and Broad the very next day when he met them in the barnyard. While he told them what the bays had said to him, they chewed their cud and listened with a dreamy look in their great mild eyes.

Twinkleheels paused and waited for them to speak. But they said nothing. Their jaws moved steadily as they chewed; but they said never a word.

"Is this true—what the bays told me about you?" he snapped.

The Price to You is no Higher —but special Borden precautions doubly insure its safety

GENERAL sanitary regulations in producing Evaporated Milk are established by law. In addition to the observance of these we establish our own specific and rigid inspection to make our milk absolutely pure and of fine quality. No single batch of Borden's Evaporated Milk is allowed to leave the condensary until it has passed a final laboratory test.

Though this elaborate inspection may make it cost more to the grocer he sells Borden's at the price of other standard brands. For he relies on it to please his most particular customers.

Borden's Evaporated Milk is pure country milk with the cream left in. It is fine for both coffee and cooking.
