

Left Waiting at Store, Says Girl; Wants Ring Back

Betrothed Went After Marriage License and Forgot to Come Back, She Tells Chief.

Harry Volz, 2310 South Twelfth street, Council Bluffs, is 21, and a snappy dresser, but suffers with a chronic shortness of money.

Isabelle Cox, 613 North Eighteenth street, Omaha, is chic and vivacious and was (past tense) his sweetheart.

Last Thursday Harry came for her and took her to Council Bluffs to get married. When they got there he was, as usual, short of change.

"Wait Here, Dear."

"Wait here, dear, while I go and get money to buy the license," he said, leaving her at Beno's popular department store.

Evidently he couldn't find the money.

There was she, waiting at the store, waiting at the store.

But he didn't come back there any more.

But He Didn't Come.

So she went to Chief of Detectives Van Deusen. Not that she cared so much about Harry, she explained.

But she wants back a diamond ring and $20, which she says Harry has. Later she received a telegram from him asking her to meet him in front of the Omaha postoffice.

She was there at the appointed hour with a detective—but Harry didn't show.

Isabelle's sister, Mrs. George Law, 613 North Eighteenth street, told police that her husband made good on $37.50 of Harry's checks.

"Not Same Man I Wed," Says Wife of Aviator

Charges of wife and child desertion probably will not be filed against Andy Nielsen, Council Bluffs aviator and former Methodist minister, according to J. H. Ready, attorney for Mrs. Nielsen, who is suing her husband for divorce.

Mrs. Nielsen filed a suit for divorce on December 10, charging cruelty. There are two children, Bertha, 9, and Paul, 6.

"He is not the man that I married," said Mrs. Nielsen. "He once was a God-fearing minister. Now he has joined the scramble for money. He has not supported his children since the time he was threatened with arrest."

"I just gave my wife $100 a short time ago, she has an enclosed automobile and lives in a house that costs $85 a month," said Nielsen, while in Omaha Friday.

Brothers, Held on Suspicion, Obtain Release

Vets, Thrown Out of Work When Strike Ends, Establish Former Good Record at Red Oak.

Ray Conkling, 24, and Jay A. Conkling, 26, of Red Oak, Ia., are brothers.

Side by side they fought in the world's war, and they have been constantly together since they were discharged from the service.

After leaving the army they entered business at Des Moines, but later moved to Red Oak when their business venture proved unsuccessful.

When the packing houses called for men to fill the gaps left by strikers, the brothers came to Omaha, where they were employed in the Dold packing plant.

Left Without Jobs. After the strikers had returned to their jobs, Ray and Jay were without jobs. They returned to their room at 2221 Leavenworth street to start on their search for work.

Neighbors, becoming suspicious when the two brothers returned to and left their home during the day, informed police they believed the boys were selling liquor.

A search by police failed to net any liquor, but on February 8 the two were arrested and held for investigation when detectives found several tools in their room.

Good Record Established. An oriental rug and several smaller floor coverings bought by one of the lads when he was wedded led to further investigation.

Yesterday, however, Chief of Detectives Van Deusen ordered their release, having established their good record with officials in Red Oak and packing plant offices.

"I regret it is the way of the world," mused Jay, when released. "But we are going back to Red Oak and stay there."
