My Marriage Problems

Adela Garrison's New Phase of "REVELATIONS OF A WIFE"

What Madge Saw Elizabeth's Daughter Do.

For an instant of dismay I could only stare at my sister-in-law, Elizabeth. I disliked her exceedingly, but as long as she is in my home I would not willingly give her cause for offense. Of course, I acquired her of voluntary expropriation, but I could not help the mental comment that if Lillian or I had been in her place neither of us would have dreamed of letting any one know we had heard even involuntarily a conversation not intended for our ears.

"I realize, of course," Elizabeth went on in the same silky sweet tone, "that I am a living exemplification of the old adage concerning eavesdroppers never hearing any good of themselves. But I can assure you that I did not intentionally."

"Dear Mrs. Harrison," Lillian interrupted in her smoothest manner, "do come here and see these children. You shouldn't miss the second of Mary's performance. It was just saying to Madge that I was just going to leave from your child most vividly some day, but she was agreeing with me. But Madge is such a partisan of Marion's that she could not bear to have all the glory taken from her, so while conceding Mary's dramatic superiority, she insists that Marion can do the acrobatic stunts better. But that is something yet to be tested. Do let me get you this chair."

Her insouciant good-humor, her suavity, her subtle art of being somewhat the last word in good breeding and knowledge of the world, triumphed even over the sullen resentment which I knew Elizabeth Harrison was masking with her eternally almost serene and serene smile. My sister-in-law allowed herself to be drawn into the room and seated in the arm-chair which Lillian placed in front of the window.

The Performance Proceeds. As she leaned toward the open window her small daughter looked up and saw her. With a gesture that would have done justice to a prestidigitator, she unclasped from her neck and dropped to the grass beside her the necklace of quaintly carved Oriental beads which was her mother's. There with a wary eye upon her maternal parent, she while apparently posturing in a serpentine dance—used her wriggling toes to such effect that soon she had the necklace in the comparatively safe shelter of a big stump. The thing was done so cleverly that if I had not seen her first gesture when she unclasped the necklace I could not have guessed that she was making any other movement than that required by the dance she was picturing.

So the child had taken the necklace without her mother's permission or knowledge! Elizabeth's discipline had not inculcated a sense of honor in her daughter, at least. Again the suspicion crossed my mind that Elizabeth used some other method to insure obedience in public than her vaunted development of the child's individual freedom. And though my conscience forbade the experiment, I knew that I meant to watch developments in the matter of the purloined necklace. Elizabeth had been so nonchalant when her children had meddled with my furnishings and draperies that I wondered how she would react to the despoiling of her own possessions.

"Now, Ladies and Gentlemen—" I had no time for much mental speculation, however, for Mary, evidently with a canny eye to engaging her mother's attention, repeated the acrobatic stunts which she and her brothers had been doing. We at the window dutifully applauded, and Lillian repeated again to Mrs. Harrison the assurance of Mary's dramatic talent.

Jerry Tiger, however, was growing restive. Mary's keen eyes saw it and evidently decided that if she kept the "menagerie" and Jerry, it was time to redeem her promise to save Marion "perfection" and discipline. She intoned with credible mimicry of a ringmaster, "we will witness a most wonderful performance—of the world's greatest acro-bat—Sarathe, Mademoiselle El-o-ise Sarathine, who will favor us with an exhibition of many low acrobatic—what is it you're going to do, Marion?" she finished in a stage whisper that convulsed us.

Marion advanced nonchalantly to the center of the lawn, and spoke clearly: "I will first turn some hand-springs," she said, proceeding to display an accomplishment which she has practiced almost from infancy, and in which she is marvelously proficient for a child. Lillian pressed her foot against mine, and I returned the signal, assuring her I recognized, at least, that Marion was on her toes, and would outshine Mary in acrobatic stunts or die right there on the lawn.

And outshone all the other children Marion did, and in so effective a fashion that long before she had finished, Mrs. Harrison came along and pasted posters on the barn, Johnnie Green likes to ride bareback. He had a notion that some day he would learn to ride standing on Twinklecheels' back.

"Really, I don't believe I ought to waste my time watching this any longer. I should think you would be glad to have your daughter exercise so strenuously, Mrs. Underwood. It is so apt to develop her muscle at the expense of her mentality."

Woman's Club Gives Varied Music Program. The music department of the Omaha Woman's club, of which Mrs. Ray J. Abbott is leader, presented a delightful program Monday afternoon at a meeting of the club in Burgess-Nash auditorium, under direction of Henry G. Cox. The hall was filled to capacity.

The first group included four numbers by the Woman's club chorus, accompanied by Mrs. Cox, with an obligato by Mrs. Ernest Reese and Miss Gertrude Theim. "Voice of My Beloved," by Daniels, and "Dreamboat," by Mrs. Edna Bennett Bradshaw, a member of the department, were especially well done.

Other numbers were given by Mrs. Flora Sears Nelson, pianist; a vocal double quartet, including Mesdames Harry McCormick, Leo Hoffman, M. H. Long, J. B. Redford, Earl C. Hathaway, A. A. Sorgfried, Margaret Winheim and Percy Dreubus, accompanied by Mrs. Ray Abbott; string trio, Mrs. Ernest Reese, violin; Mrs. Martin Donlon, cello, and Mrs. Archibald Burnite, piano; dance numbers, Virginia Holley, Arthur Kinnaman, and Catherine Gallagher, pupils of Miss Mary Cooper, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Abbott.

The department will entertain at a colonial breakfast Wednesday, February 22, at noon at the Y. W. C. A. All members of the club are invited to the Y. W. C. A. March 8.

During the business session the club voted that letters be sent to representatives and senators using a speedy ratification of measures adopted by the arms conference. The president, Mrs. Charles Johannes, presided.

Missionary Workers Inspect Willard Hall. Bishop Homer C. Stuntz and representatives of the Woman's Home Missionary society were guests at a luncheon of Omaha laymen yesterday noon at the Chamber of Commerce. The visitors were in the city to discuss tentative plans for welfare work in Omaha and to visit Willard Hall, which has been established as a home for working girls.

Those present were Bishop Stuntz, Mrs. W. A. C. Goode, Sidney, O. first vice president of the national organization; Mrs. A. E. Griffith, Des Moines, national trustee; Mrs. R. J. McKenzie, Tecumseh, Nebraska, state president; Mrs. E. E. Hosman, Kimball, corresponding secretary; Miss Henrietta Bowers, University Place, recording secretary; Dr. J. W. Kirkpatrick, district superintendent; Thomas F. Sturgis, David C. Cole and C. W. De Lamatre.

Following the luncheon the visitors were taken on a tour of inspection of Willard Hall.

A Silly Song. By A. CUCKOO BIRD. This is the day we never fail to clutter up the United States with sentimental junk. With lacrimated cards and paper hearts, and Cupids fat, with crimson darts; and all that kind of bunk. I hear the weary postman bleat, as he comes trudging down the street, beneath his load of slop. And, as he nears my parlor floor and pray he will not stop. But, lo, he dumps before my shack the entire contents of his sack and goes back as a home for working girls.

Your question seems to be, are you to forget this man here or some place else and love him in vain. I think you'd better choose the former course and forget him, since he seems to care nothing for you.

Becker: We'll assume, of course, you have slept with windows open. Don't close it for a minute or two. Before you arise stretch your arms above the head, then stretch your legs one at a time until you actually feel them lengthen. Then stretch entire body, so the spinal column will get the benefit. Then get every organ in condition to profit by the intake of oxygen. Then arise; with head up, shoulders back, arms at side, feet on floor, bend his slowly. Fill your lungs until you feel you cannot take in any more; then let them empty themselves slowly and without effort. Do this from 15 to 20 times and you will feel the blood circulating from head to toe.

To your shower or your plunge or your spray in cold or tepid water; follow with a good, vigorous rub-down, and sally forth to the breakfast table and office or other place of duty a happy, smiling creature with a capacity for work and agreeable conversation not experienced in many a day.

SLEEPY-TIME TALES

THE TALE OF PONY TWINKLEHEELS BY ARTHUR SCOTT BAILEY

CHAPTER XXI. Jumping Mud Puddles. Johnnie Green had often ridden bareback. Lacking a pony, before Twinklecheels came to the farm to live, he had ridden the old horse

CHAPTER XXI. Jumping Mud Puddles. Johnnie Green had often ridden bareback. Lacking a pony, before Twinklecheels came to the farm to live, he had ridden the old horse

His leap took his rider unawares.

Ebenezer back and forth between the barn and the pasture, guiding him by his halter rope. Ebenezer was a steady old fellow. He never jumped nor shied. He preferred walking to any other gait. Without a whip Johnnie Green had hard work to make him trot. It took a great deal of drumming against his ribs by Johnnie Green's heels to induce him to hurry his steps.

Twinklecheels was different from Ebenezer. He was frisky. Yet Johnnie sometimes put a bridle on him and rode him without a saddle. Especially after the circus men came along and pasted posters on the barn, Johnnie Green likes to ride bareback. He had a notion that some day he would learn to ride standing on Twinklecheels' back.

Farmer Green, however, did not approve of that plan. When Johnnie mentioned it to him he said "No!" in a most decided fashion. "That pony would be sure to throw you," he told Johnnie.

"I could try standing on Ebenezer first," Johnnie suggested. "His back is better. And he certainly would come to me."

Somehow his father didn't care for that scheme either. "We don't want any broken legs around here," he declared, "nor necks, either. Broken necks are very slow to mend."

So Johnnie Green had to give up his plan, for the time being. He made up his mind, however, that when he was grown up, he would learn to ride standing up—and turn somersaults in the air off a horse's back. But now he knew that he must content himself with less risky sports.

Something happened one day that caused Johnnie to admit to himself the wisdom of his father's advice. He was riding Twinklecheels along the road, bareback, when a heavy rain, in the first of which Johnnie knew he was sitting almost on Twinklecheels' tail. Instead of splashing through a big mud puddle, Twinklecheels had taken it into his head to jump it.

Johnnie took his rider unawares. He broke off with the rear as if Twinklecheels' back had been greased. And, if he hadn't clutched the bridle reins, he would have dropped off into the very middle of the puddle.

After that Johnnie kept a sharp eye for mud puddles. When he knew that Twinklecheels was going to jump one he had no trouble in sticking to his seat.

Soon Johnnie decided once more that it would be easy to learn to be a circus rider. Certainly it was no trick at all to sit on Twinklecheels' bare back so long as he knew what the pony was going to do. It was as easy as walking a tight rope. And that was a feat that Johnnie Green had already mastered.

He broke only a collar bone learning that. (Copyright, 1922, by the Metropolitan Newspaper Service.)

Lincoln Letter

Sent to Ulster

Head of A. O. H. Writes to Sir James Craig Asking Undivided Ireland.

In the spirit of Lincoln's birthday yesterday, Dr. W. J. McCrann, state president of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, and prominent in Irish affairs in Omaha, sent the following letter to Sir James Craig of the house of parliament in Ulster, the seat of government in northern Ireland:

"Today we are celebrating Lincoln's birthday on all sides of the nation, paying a tribute to the greatest of men of his age. But in Kentucky—the nearest and greatest scholar, statesman and patriot of any nation or of any age."

"It was Lincoln that told Jeff Davis 'You shall not divide our country.' And while it cost millions of lives and untold millions of dollars, he preserved our union, our strength and power, leaving us today second to no nation on earth."

"It was Lincoln who stepped forward and lifted the yoke of slavery and servitude off a poor, oppressed and despised race which announced to the world that America is the land of liberty, equal rights and opportunity."

"So with this example before you, I urge that there be no north or south of Ireland, but let it be one country, one government by one people absolutely."

"We urge the house of parliament at Ulster and elect your best and ablest statesman to the cabinet of the British government and take the stand that Ireland's status should not be measured by their political or racial sentiments, but by their location in Ireland, but by their brains, manhood and ability to serve their country and their fellow man."

Omaha Does Celebrate Their First Anniversary. Omaha drove No. 1, pioneer lodger of the Benevolent and Patriotic Order of the Does held its first anniversary in the Elks lodge room Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Despite the cold weather and counter attractions there was a satisfactory attendance.

The program was of a high grade both in instrumental and vocal music. Rev. Dr. Poucher delivered a half hour address on the life of Lincoln and the progress made by the Does during the last year, which has been most satisfactory.

QUEER FEELINGS AT MIDDLE AGE. Sheboygan, Wisconsin.—"I was run down, tired and nervous. I could not even do my own housework, could not sleep at night and all kinds of queer thoughts would come to me. Finally I gave up going to the doctor and a friend told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After the first bottle I could sleep better and I have kept on improving ever since. I have taken seven bottles now and am so happy that I am all over these bad feelings."

Luncheon Given in Honor of Librarians

A luncheon was given last Saturday at noon in the Burgess-Nash tea room in honor of Miss Anna V. Jennings, librarian of the State Teachers' college at Kearney, and Miss Zara Shields, librarian at the Central High school of Omaha.

The luncheon party included 25 members of a class in library work conducted for Omaha teachers and librarians by the Kearney State Teachers' college under the auspices of the Omaha school forum.

Advertisement for Kellogg's Bran. Kellogg's Bran is nature's own relief from constipation!

You must not take chances with constipation when statistics tell you that nine-tenths of all sickness can be traced to it! You must get permanent relief; you must drive constipation out of your system!

Realize that pills and cathartics, at best, can only afford temporary relief, while they are irritating to the delicate intestinal tract.

Now—compare the action of these pills and cathartics with the natural and wholesome effect of Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbed. Science knows of no such wonderful sweeter, cleanser and purifier of the bowels as Kellogg's Bran, yet it is simply nature's food. Bran's effect is certain and relief permanent if at least two tablespoonsful are eaten daily. Chronic cases should eat as much more as is necessary for results.

Take consistently, Kellogg's Bran will drive constipation from the system. Your physician will endorse the use of Kellogg's Bran for constipation!

Eat Kellogg's Bran either as a delicious and nutritious cereal, or sprinkle it over your favorite cereal. Eat it in many other foods which are made more appetizing by its nut-like flavor! Kellogg's Bran makes cakes are the best you ever tasted! Use it in raisin bread or muffins, gravies, macaronis, pancakes, etc. (Enclose no package.)

The big thing is to get Kellogg's Bran into your system quickly! Get it at your grocer's.

P. S.—Pimples are caused by constipation. Kellogg's Bran will clear them up and also free your breath from intestinal odors.
