THE Drama league was much in evidence at the performance of "Mr. Pin Passes By" at the Brandeis theater Wednesday night. Aside from the fact that it is considered a play of first rank well done, members of the league have an interest in it. They are concerned with the principle back of Theater Guild plays, of which this is one, and the first one ever presented in Omaha.

Mrs. E. M. Syfert, when president of the Drama league, last year tried to persuade the guild to send a play to be staged in Omaha owing to expense of production and tour. They said they hoped later to have a play on the road. Their hopes were realized, and now two plays are touring, "Lilium" and "Mr. Pin Passes By."

The New York Theater Guild is a non-commercial organization of professional actors. "Art for art's sake" is their goal. Since their organization in 1918 they have presented "The Bonds of Interest," "Lilium," "Heart Break House," "Jane Grege," "John Ferguson," "The Treasure," and "Mr. Pin Passes By." They are now staging "Back to Methuselah" in New York City. It is being given in a cycle of three parts, the first part being presented one week, the second and third following in successive weeks. Their house is sold out for the performances.

It goes without saying that many of the productions they offer would not be seen but for an organization with their ideals and standards. The money they make goes back into the productions and if there is a balance left it is divided among the workers, actors and employes, who are salaried in the first place.

Dudley Digges, in the cast at the Brandeis, won distinction last year as producer and actor in "Heart-break House." Laura Hope Crews, starring in the company, is not a member of the regular guild players. Actors are brought in from outside when needed for certain roles. Their plays are chosen by a play committee who submit their suggestions to the board of directors for approval.

Kenneth Macgowan, who comes to Omaha for the Drama league March 3, is a member of the board of directors of the Theater guild. Helen Ingersoll, former Omaha girl, who has made a great success as a business manager for the New York Theater guild, has told Omaha friends she has been asked to start a theater of her own.

It is the hope of Mrs. Syfert that we will have more Theater guild plays.

Miss Kate McHugh, president of the Drama league, declared the play very enjoyable. Mrs. Samuel Burns regards it as the "choicest kind of a play and the best company we have had here this winter." Mrs. Arthur Crittenden Smith pronounced it "charming and possessing a wonderful moral."

Mrs. S. S. Caldwell, who found the play highly entertaining, found a striking resemblance between Miss Crews, the lead, and Miss Luda Curtis, formerly of Omaha, now of New York.

Mrs. C. T. Kowitz, Mrs. George Prinz, Mrs. A. M. Jeffrey, Mrs. C. B. Keller, Mrs. M. M. Levings, Mrs. C. E. Johannes, Mrs. Robert Manning, Mrs. Paul Gallagher, Mrs. C. W. Hamilton and Mrs. W. F. Baxter were other members of the Drama league attending the performance.

Misses Edith Standeven, Lucile Scott and Cassie Brown of the Women's Overseas Service league, arranged the program, which begins at 3. Visitors are asked to take the 2 o'clock car from Twenty-fourth and N streets. The next meeting of the overseas girls is Monday evening, March 6, at the Pontenille.

P. Whitmore a framed picture.

Miss Campbell's Boat Delayed. J. W. Campbell has received a wire stating that the Oraduna, the steamship on which Miss Almarine Campbell is returning from Europe, and which was to have landed last Monday, has met with some delay on the trip across the Atlantic and will not dock until Friday. Mrs. Campbell, who is in New York to meet her daughter, and Mrs. Campbell will probably not reach Omaha until the end of next week.

Mrs. O. M. Smith

Through the activity of Mrs. O. M. Smith, finance chairman of the National League for Women's Service here, a number of large card clubs have made reservation for the day nursery benefit bridge on February 28 at the Burgess-Nash tea room.

Mrs. Smith has originated several unique plans for securing funds for the league's day nursery, in which she is greatly interested. One plan includes "penny saving" by a large group of children under the direction of Mrs. Charles Gardner.

THE TALE OF MASTER MEADOW MOUSE

BY ARTHUR SCOTT BAILEY

CHAPTER VI Meeting Mr. Crow.

During his first summer in Pleasant Valley, Master Meadow Mouse had often noticed old Mr. Crow flying from the woods to the cornfield. Once in a while Mr. Crow dropped down into the meadow on some business or other. But Master Meadow Mouse did not fear him. The grass was high in the meadow, screening the goings and comings of Master Meadow Mouse from prying eyes.

But after having time the meadow was a different place. There was no cover over Master Meadow Mouse's paths. He had to be watchful all the time because Henry Hawk had an unpleasant habit of sailing high up in the sky and dropping down like lightning when he saw anybody like Master Meadow Mouse stirring.

Old Mr. Crow continued to journey daily between the cornfield and the woods. But Master Meadow Mouse paid little heed to him. He believed Mr. Crow to be harmless, so long as he didn't catch small folk in the cornfield. The old gentleman was very touchy about corn. He flew into a rage when anybody but himself ate even one kernel.

Now it happened that just before having time Mrs. Meadow Mouse had stopped giving her son lessons. She said that she had told him everything she knew. She had told him everything she knew. She had told him everything she knew. She had told him everything she knew.

My Marriage Problems

Adelle Garrison's New Phase of "REVELATIONS OF A WIFE"

The Unexpected Complication That Met Madge and Lillian in the Kitchen.

"I knew it!" I exclaimed, womanlike, as Lillian and I, at Marion's frightened call, made a dash to the kitchen from the veranda where we had arranged the coffee summons to my father and Allen Drake. "Whatever is Mother doing in the kitchen? I thought I had every bit of the work done, and that she was lying down."

"She was," Lillian rejoined breathlessly, as she ran, "but she probably seized the chance of our being gone to do some extra bit of cleaning." The truth of her supposition was brought forcibly home to us as we burst into the kitchen door. An immense dish cupboard in the kitchen stood open, and on the floor beside it, in the midst of a clatter of broken crockery, sat my mother-in-law, her face obediently from the room she poured some water into a basin, and with a soft cloth began to lave my mother-in-law's face.

Everything is Cleaned. "I'll have him here in a jiffy," Dicky promised, and hurried from the room. Then Lillian and I bent over his mother, trying to make her as comfortable as possible. I wondered if Lillian was as dismayed as I over the prospect of the next few weeks, with Mother Graham a helpless invalid, and Katie gone.

Speaks on Work of Legislature. Mrs. H. H. Wheeler of Lincoln will speak on the work of the legislature of 1921 Friday afternoon, 3 o'clock, in the Burgess-Nash auditorium. The public is invited. Mrs. Wheeler conducted the Grace M. Wheeler class in citizenship in Omaha last year.

THE INDEPENDENT WOMAN is one of the brightest jewels which adorn our modern, economic system. But too often this independence is gained at the cost of health, and the great moments of life are spent in a struggle through her duties, a prey to nervousness, backache and despondency. Does not her independence then become more of a burden than a joy? Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped many such women to regain their zest in life, and will help many more.

A Silly Song

By A. CUCKOO BIRD.

Old Peleg Brown belongs to church, and runs a butcher shop. Six days a week he slaughters goats, to sell as mutton chop. On Sunday, he goes to the church, and when the parson prays, he sits and punctuates the prayer with deep amens and yeas. But, in his shop, on other days, he weighs his hand, and wistful, he pats a hundred iron men, for Peleg's grimy fat. I think, if I were Peleg Brown, I'd cease to peddle meat; or else, on Sunday, in the church, I would not groan and bleat.

Parents' Problems

How can a little boy of 5 who is inclined to be greedy, be taught to be content with enough? I wonder if this little boy is not following the example set by some other member of the family. If no one at the table is selfish, and no one in the library or living room is selfish, the example of the family life ought soon to check his personal greediness. Invite other little children to the house to play with him. At 5 a boy is old enough to be taught to compare. Guide him to see what other children do with their toys and how they behave at table.
