Theodore N. Vail Declares Untouched Wealth in Country Would Re-

A few days before Theodore N. Vail departed for a winter resort on one of the islands off the shore of Brunswick, Ga., he spoke of the undeveloped resources of the United States, saying that although the developed resources are represented in dollars by many hundred millions, even billions, nevertheless the much greater resources which now await development have hardly been scrat scratched. It was his opinion that these resources will create new wealth which of itself will be sufficient to permanently establish the United States as the greaest of all nations in strength, and also provide the means whereby devastated Europe can, with the outstretched hand of the United States, be brought to
