

Whose Wife Is Mrs. E. Goodwin? Lawyers Puzzled

Bluffs Prosecutor Says That Woman Is Bigamist—Officials Here Say Not—Divorce Still Pending.

Fifteen years ago she was Miss Harriet E. Lane, a pretty country lass of Atlantic, Ia.

Fourteen years ago she became Mrs. William Headinger. Her husband then was a wealthy Atlantic farmer.

Twelve years ago she divorced Headinger and married Charles Kellogg of Creston, Ia.

Married in Bluffs.
Seven years ago she left Kellogg and in Council Bluffs, Ia., married William Henry Hall.

Two years ago she left Hall to marry E. H. Goodwin, with whom she says she expected to live happily ever after.

Then, unexpectedly, Hall caused a complaint to be filed against Mrs. Goodwin. Deputy County Attorney Beal recommended Hall's charge be dismissed, declaring that after investigating he believes she is Goodwin's legal wife.

Swanson Has Different View.

But County Attorney C. E. Swanson of Council Bluffs has a different view of the situation. He has been informed that, although the much married Mrs. Goodwin may have a legal title to her latest name, she also may be guilty of bigamy.

He says that Kellogg, otherwise husband No. 2, though reported killed in an accident, is also reported to be still living.

District court records here show that Mrs. Goodwin filed a suit for annulment of her marriage to Hall on June 13, 1919, but that she has not obtained a decree.

Living With No. 4.

Hence, according to my information, Mrs. Goodwin has three living husbands," quoth County Attorney Swanson. "But it is up to Omaha officials to file charges." Thus far Omaha authorities have shown no inclination to file charges.

And in the meantime Mrs. Goodwin is living blissfully with husband No. 4, 1436 North Nineteenth street.

There' Given to Legion

A framed memento, containing four photographs of the American soldier cemeteries "over there"—Buresnes, Belleau Wood and Romagne in France and one in Belgium—a gold star and an inscription from William Cressy's poem, "When the Blue Star Turns to Gold," was presented to the American Legion auxiliary by J. M. Buck, who originated the idea of the gold star tribute pinned to the casques of soldiers returned from France.

The frame will be hung in Memorial hall in the courthouse until the legion has permanent quarters. Mrs. Harry Hough, auxiliary secretary, announced.
