The Encyclopedia Americana

"Knowledge Is Power"

The 1922 Americana costs less per volume than any other encyclopedia on the market. Fair, unbiased, scholarly, it is accepted by over 2,000 universities and colleges. Maps made by Rand McNally at a cost of $48,000 show new Europe and new Africa. Built by the Scientific American compiling department, the encyclopedia contains over 11,000 signed articles. The Americana's thirty volumes contain a total of 88,000 articles. The production of the set cost over $1,000,000.

The Omaha Bee has selected the "Best Advertisements" submitted of the respective Merchants shown on this page from the many received by them. No complete "set" of the advertisements submitted has been reproduced, but the "best" from each contestant has been used.

There were so many "good ones" that it was difficult for the committee to select the "best ones." However, we trust they will meet with your approval.

Winner of Columbia Records at Hartman's, Leona Leary, 3216 Poppleton avenue. Winners of Orpheum tickets, Mrs. Arthur G. Fales, W. C. Bouk and John F. Saup.

When You Think Entertainment Think

In the arrangement of the Rialto Theater every provision is made for the convenience of our patrons. The building is one that every citizen of Omaha may well be proud of. The beauty of design and interior decorations are pleasing to the eye. The high class musical selections rendered by Harry Brader's Orchestra Supreme and also Julius K. Johnson at the organ are pleasing to the ear. The deference shown you by our corps of competent attendants will meet your approval. The presentation of ONLY the newest, the best and the cleanest in pictures at the Rialto will be especially pleasing to your moral sense and make it indeed

Orpheum THEATRE

The home of refined vaudeville. Stars of renown on the program every week.

Many imitators, but no equals. To copy is the sincerest flattery.

The Orpheum management strives to please—no expense is too great.

The large attendance at every performance is the best evidence of its superiority.

Its varied selections of high-class vaudeville performers, coupled with a fine orchestra, gives ample range to satisfy the most exacting.

The management pride themselves (and justly so) upon their fine playhouse, courteous employees and pleasing programs from time to time. The large attendance and favorable comments following each performance is sufficient evidence to convince any of the fact that the is the best, most popular amusement place in Omaha.
