An artist's idea of a rest seems to be in doing what he most enjoys, but certainly not in "doing nothing." Myron Van Brunt, who is home for a visit from a residence in New York and a year in France, has seemed to find a niche for himself in Omaha during his vacation.

Three weeks ago he gave a talk and a demonstration before the Fine Arts society on batik. Early in April he will offer a class at the Blackstone over a period of several weeks in which he will give instruction in this branch of art. Mr. Van Brunt's batik has been on exhibit here at various times, notably during the Nebraska artists' exhibit at the Omaha Public Library last fall.

"I am giving up batik as a profession," said Mr. Van Brunt, "because it takes me away from my drawing." Upon his return east, Mr. Van Brunt will devote himself to the illustration of his children's stories, which he has written during the past year.

Mr. Van Brunt is assisting Miss Mary Cooper with her dance recital to be given at the Brandeis April 7. He is trying some new lighting effects and is also working on the sets and the costumes.

Problems That Perplex

Answered by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

What to Do

Dear Miss Fairfax: Like most all others I am writing to you for advice.

I am 18 and am quite popular. I go with a nice gentleman two years my senior. I like him very much and he treats me just as I like.

He wishes to kiss me at different times and I, most generally, refuse, and he gets peeved at me. What would you advise me to do?

Will you also tell me if it is proper to hold a gentleman's coat. Hoping to see this in print. ANXIOUS.

Parents Don't Trust Him

Dear Miss Fairfax: I have been going with a girl about six months. I have only taken her out, that is, downtown, about three times. Her folks seem to like me but it seems they can't trust me. I love the girl and she has told me so.

What would you advise me to do? It makes me embarrassed when my friends when they ask me why I don't take her out.

Do you give the girl a good straight-forward invitation to go some place? A girl has too much pride to suggest where she would like to go. Can you think of something attractive of which her parents might approve? They are right not to want her to go just "downtown."

I think I would come to an understanding on the point of whether her parents would trust me or not. Talk to them about it if necessary. I cannot be sure, but it seems to me that what you lack is initiative in the matter.

Try to be Broadminded

Dear Miss Fairfax: I have been going about with a young man for the past two years and during that time I have learned to love him. He has also told me of his love and wishes to make me his wife, but as our faiths differ I am afraid to take the step.

Do you think this would cause unhappiness in the future? MARCKELIA.

In spite of all the creeds and doctrines, most of us believe about the same things in this world. After all, does it matter by what path you come to a spot of beauty and peace—only the road over which you come to one you traveled fairly and honestly, with respect and regard for its beauty and the rights of others? The God of goodness and love whom we all worship may differ Himself differently to differing eyes—but if we serve Him well—do you think we cannot work side by side with those who serve a little other than we in form, but the same in spirit? And this means that, save in the cases of the very orthodox faiths, I believe that of different creeds may marry in perfect security today. Tolerance, goodwill, brotherly love and broadmindedness are the things we need today, not a narrow observance of creed that is more interested in doctrine than in the great spirit to whom the religious devotees itself.

Would-know: It is easy to be popular. You can't care with whom you achieve it, but the only kind which is really worth while is with people who are really worth while.

The girl who assumes a sporty pose for purposes of popularity with men makes a mistake. At best any popularity which she may gain in that way will be of a cheap kind and will not be with men who are really worth while.

My sort of posing is usually a failure because, while people may not be able to analyze the reasons, nevertheless, they instinctively sense the false ring in it. This particular kind of posing is vulgar and cheap and too high a price to pay for a little popularity.

Mrs. Kountze Tells of Matzenauer's Famous Roles

Mrs. Luther Kountze will be a member of the audience who will most thoroughly enjoy hearing Matzenauer Friday evening at the Auditorium. Her acquaintance with the prima donna's wonderful voice goes back to 1910-11, when Matzenauer was appearing in grand opera in Munich. Mrs. Kountze spent six months at Munich that winter and heard the singer everytime she appeared. The roles she particularly remembers her in are Carmen, Venus Tannhauser, Fidelio and Aida.

The Seguidilla song from Carmen is to be on Matzenauer's program Friday evening when she appears under the auspices of the Tuesday Musical.

A Silly Song

By A CUCKOO BIRD

Paul Revere was a rider of fame and Jenny McNeil was another one's name. Lady Godiva and Sheridan, too, come in for their share when the medals are due. And I could name others from now till daylight that have done famous riding by day and by night. But all of the riders that rode long ago are pikers compared with a rider I know. He rides every day and he never says fail. Thru mud holes and snowdrifts he brings me my mail. The bizzards may howl and the rivers may rise and the rain in a cloudburst may fall from the skies, but old Charlie Saum in his carriage of tin, about half past 11 turns up with a grin and stuffs in my mailbox. The Omaha Bee, owned by Nels Uplik and jazzed up by me. So remember when praising the fambus and great, this once a day hero that comes to your gate.

SLEEPY-TIME TALES

THE TALE OF THE MULEY COW

BY ARTHUR SCOTT BAILEY

CHAPTER IV. Owing a Boy.

By the end of a quiet week Johnnie Green was able to milk quite well. When he sat down beside the Muley Cow he could play a merry tune as he made the tiny streams of milk tinkle against the bottom of the milk she felt that matters might have been worse. And when he gave her a tender young beet as a special treat, she began to think that matters couldn't have been better. She saw right away that being owned by a boy was a bad thing, after all. It was the sound of it that she didn't like.

Naturally there was a good deal of gossip among the cows. And the next day, in the pasture, one meddlesome creature went up to the Muley Cow and asked her what she was going to do about it.

"About what?" the Muley Cow inquired.

"About your being owned by Farmer Green's boy," the other explained. "Are you going to run away?"

Well, the Muley Cow laughed right in her face. It wasn't a thing she was used to doing. But the question seemed to her a very silly one.

"Run away?" she exclaimed. "Why should I run away? I've lived on the farm all my life and I wouldn't leave it for anything."

"But that boy! Surely, at your age, you can't enjoy belonging to anybody as young as he is!" the prying neighbor went on.

"Bliss you!" cried the Muley Cow. "If he milks me, and takes me to the pasture and back, and gives me good things to eat, and brushes my coat for me, shouldn't you say that he belonged to me? It isn't every cow that has a boy like Johnnie Green to wait on her."

The meddlesome neighbor didn't quite know what answer to make. She was rather a stupid person, anyhow. Moreover, she was a great gossip. So she hurried off to tell all her friends that they were mistaken about Johnnie Green and the Muley Cow.

A good many of her friends admitted that there was something to be said on both sides of the question. And all of them agreed that the Muley Cow was certainly Johnnie Green's favorite.

Common Sense

By J. J. MUNDY. Are You a Good Obstacle-Pacer? Many annoying things have happened under them.

You have cursed and stormed and worked yourself into a frenzy and taken more energy from your work than you would have had to put into it to make a perfect record, and yet you are way behind.

That did you gain by your loss of control? You are worn and irritable—perhaps disgusted.

You have made all around you uneasy and unhappy. And all because you have lost a grip on your emotions.

Excitations come to every person who performs anything worth while. Every business has its drawbacks. True, the trying things happen at the most inopportune time. That is what makes them so "trying."

Why not make life an obstacle race? You used to enjoy that sort of a race in your childhood and the more obstacles the better. When you are prepared for a crisis it does not unnerve you, it only gives you a fair trial.

My Marriage Problems

Adelle Garrison's New Phase of "REVELATIONS OF A WIFE" (Copyright, 1921.)

The News That Dicky Brought to Midge

Did you find her?" I sprang up from my easy chair in the sitting-room of the hotel suite as Dicky opened the door and came in. To me, chafing under the inaction which my black eye and discolored forehead had imposed upon the last few interesting since Dicky's departure in search of Katie's present whereabouts had seemed an eternity.

Constantly before my eyes was the vision of Lillian contending with the combination of my mother-in-law's broken arm, the conciliation of Mrs. Ticer—whose methods of housekeeping Mother Graham outspokenly disapproved—and the care of Junior, the while her own work loomed mountain-like in the background. I had expected to be gone but a few hours, overnight at the most, and that Dicky would be at Lillian's right hand during my absence. But my bizarre accident had delayed my errand almost 24 hours, and had been to my side. Every nerve was tingling as I awaited the answer to Dicky's question.

Dicky grinned tantalizingly, and puffed his chest out and thumped it approvingly.

"Behold the man who should have taken the message to Garcia if he had been out of the cradle at the time," he said. "Yes, I have found our missing handmaiden, that is, I have discovered where she is at the present moment, and will be for the next two or three hours at least."

"Where?" I sprang up with the tense monosyllable, snatched up my hat, and moved toward the bedroom and the mirror.

"In a cheap restaurant in Brooklyn, near the Long Island station, where she is cooking, I believe. What's the big idea of the quick costume change?"

"Have It Your Own Way." "Because," I said, adjusting my heavy veil so that it fell over my face, "if we hurry, we may be able to catch that 4 o'clock train back home. We ought not to be away from mother and Junior another night."

"Granted," Dicky replied with maddening masculine imperturbability. "But that's no reason why we shouldn't lunch comfortably here. We'll have plenty of time."

"Dicky!" All the exasperation which his attitude demanded was in my tone. "You know better than that! Plenty of time, indeed! When nobody knows where Katie's things are, and how long it will take her to get ready, or anything, I finish in a jiffy."

"May I ask," Dicky inquired with heavy sarcasm, "just what you do expect to do—lunch at the hash house where Katie is?"

FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW

Druggist Says Ladies Are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmothers made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wych's Sage and Sulphur Compound."

By morning the gray hair disappears, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time.

By morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wych's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautiful darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

American Women Are Careless

Women are too apt to overestimate their strength and overtax it. When feeling well they take unnecessary chances, which in the long run cause much pain and trouble. Wet feet, exposure to cold, lifting heavy burdens and overwork will often develop troubles which cause no end of suffering.

Lydia Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the unfailing remedy in such cases. Thousands of American women will testify to this fact who have regained health and strength by its use. If you are suffering it will pay you to give it a fair trial.

their ecstatic giggling. By the time we had reached our station and I had followed Dicky to the door of the restaurant where we expected to find Katie I was almost ready for nervous tears.

Stang is contagious. When exposed to it continuously there is no assurance of immunity. Boys and girls who hear good English at home read and enjoy good books and do faithfully in school the prescribed work in English, may (and probably will), catch along in the high school as they did the mumps in kindergarten; but with ordinary precautions the attack will run its normal course.

Parents' Problems

How can boys and girls of high school age be induced to use good English—instead of the slangy expressions for which they seem to have a preference?
