Newspapers of France in War Debt Campaign

America and American Financiers Blamed for Almost Every III Existing in Europe.

Paris, March 24 .- A campaign is Decision was reserved. being carried on in certain French | The plaintiff declared her house-

ber of parliament, says:

"Let us re-read the enthusiastic recitals of Marshal Foch's voyage across the United States! And the accounts, also, of the multiple hur-peated requests the following agreerahs which greeted Briand and Viviani! Reread them, I say-to measure their fragility. The sympathy of the Yankees stops at the edge of their pocketbook. They tell us, with a haughty brutality, that, in 25 years, we must pay our debts to them. Twenty-five years! In other words, less delay than a house seconded.

Andre Tardieu in Clemenceau's new paper, the Echo National, strikes a similar note. In a two-column editorial, he blames America and American financiers for almost every ill existing in Europe.

Relief Worker in Russia

Robbed of Letter of Credit Riga, March 24.—(By A. P.)— John A. Moorehead of New York, representative in Russia of the National Lutheran council, which is cooperating with the American relief administration, has arrived here from Odessa. Calls for American Aid in the April Issue of Hearst's International ALIBERAL EDUCATION

Is He a Second Nero or a Second Lincoln?

IKOLAI Lenin, the strange being who has rocked the modern world to its very foundation, has been compared with Nero, the destructive Roman tyrant, and with Abraham Lincoln, the Great Emancipator, the Preserver of the Union. He has sent a message to Americans in the April issue of Hearst's International that thrills you with admiration or fills you with indignation. Lenin says: "I am a dictator, but I am a dictator of the will of the Russian masses!" What do you think?

Hapgood's Fascinating Editorials—Fiction by Master Writers

Trapped By A. CONAN DOYLE

If height makes you dizzy you will long remember A. Conan Doyle's latest story, "Trapped." He carries you in an elevator to a height of 500 feet above the ground, while you watch a maniac sawing the cable-all that holds you between life and death. This is one of the most thrilling situations that this great English writer has ever conceived.

Norman Hapgood's Editorials

He writes with a smash about the Super-Bore-the dress-suit person who has no other line of conversation than "Prohibition and Its Failure." "Women-Sane and Not," are given something to think about. He presents a world view of the Farm Bloc movement. He sums up the situation in France. He comments on what we are doing in Russia. He suggests what the Asian situation will presently mean to us.

A Happy Ending By DONN BYRNE

How much should a girl sacrifice is a question faced by girls who seek a career on the stage. The terrific sacrifice pictured may cause many others to pause before they take a fatal step.

THERE are many other notable contributions to the April issue of Hearst's International, now on all news-stands, including "Secret Places of the Heart," by H. G. Wells; a special article on Mexico by Lincoln Steffens; an amazing revelation of Boies Penrose's character by William Hard: "The Talkers," by Robert W. Chambers:all of which, and many others, have cost an amazing amount to assemble. They are public property-in exchange for a trifling sum—on more than thirty thousand news-stands.
