

Harding Urges Churches to Aid Law Officials

Tells Bible Class There is a Tendency Toward Privileged View of Citizens' Relations to State.

By the Associated Press. Washington, March 25.—The church can render no higher service at this time than to put forth its strongest influence in behalf of law and willing obedience to the law of the land. President Harding declared in an address before the Bible class of Calvary Baptist church. "Without giving too much weight to alarmist expressions," the president said, "we must nevertheless recognize that there is a very apparent tendency to a lighter and more frivolous view of the citizens' relations to both the state and the church. If people who are known as leaders, be added, become known for their defiance of some law, they need not be astonished if their example is followed by others. At another point, Mr. Harding discussed the "loose talk nowadays about the cause of the spiritual demoralization of the community" and declared that it could not be laid entirely to the war but to a tendency before that period toward "a certain moral laxity, a shifting of standards, a weakening of the sterner fibers."

"There is no relationship here between church and state," the president said. "Religious liberty has its unalterable place, along with civil and human liberty, in the very foundation of the republic. Therein is shown the far-reaching vision of the immortal founders, and we are a better people and a better republic because there is that freedom. I fear it is forgotten sometimes. In the experiences of a year in the presidency there has come to me no other such unending reminder of the manifest religious intolerance which exists among many of our citizens."

"In spite of our complete divorce of church and state, quite in harmony with our religious freedom, there is an important relationship between church and nation, because no nation can prosper, no nation can survive, if it ever forgets almighty God. I have believed that religious reverence has played a very influential and helpful part in the matchless American achievements, and I wish it ever to abide. I do not fail to recall that the religious life makes for the simple life and it would be like a divine benediction to restore the simpler life in this republic."

"The failures of the past invariably have been preceded by contempt for the law by spiritual paralysis and moral weakness, all of which had their origin in the weakened influence of the church. We know the helpful, exalting influence of our religious institutions. We shall be made stronger and we shall ever find greater pride and greater security in the midst which righteousness exalts."

Dog Guards Errant Baby

Bobbie Settle and Jack, the water spaniel who watched over him when he strayed from home.

Clad in his blue overalls and red sweater, little blue-eyed Bobbie Settle, not yet 3 years old, left his home at 4547 North Forty-first avenue at 10 Friday morning with his tricycle and play ball. He met a 4-year-old playmate, and together they wandered over the hill to the east, the road being familiar to the older of the two.

About noon Mrs. Robert Settle, Bobbie's mother, sent to the neighbors for Bobbie. The little boy who had gone over the hill with Bobbie had returned home alone, bringing with him only the tricycle and ball. Mrs. Settle became alarmed and notified the neighbors, who helped her search for her boy.

When it was learned that Jack, the big, brown water spaniel, was gone, too, Mrs. Settle felt relieved, as Jack and Bobbie are inseparable. Four hours later Jack and Bobbie, crying, stopped in front of the Colfax grocery, 4502 North Thirtieth street, where they had adventured, a mile from home. L. H. Lipp, clerk in the grocery, came to the rescue of the two wanderers. He called the city clerk to identify the dog by means of his license. Mrs. Settle was notified and David Settle, the boy's grandfather, came to take him home. Meanwhile Bobbie was fed candy and cookies to quiet his sobs.

Former Federal Agent Indicted for Conspiracy

Philadelphia, March 25.—William C. McConnell, former federal prohibition director for Pennsylvania, and 26 others, including several associates of McConnell, while he was prohibition director, were indicted by a federal grand jury for conspiracy to defraud the United States government in the fraudulent issuance of permits to withdraw liquor from bond.

The indictments were returned after a grand jury investigation of the alleged release of 700,000 gallons of whiskey and alcohol to bootleggers during the 70-day regime of McConnell as head of the prohibition law enforcement staff in Pennsylvania.

Samuel B. Wolf, former chief of the Pittsburgh prohibition office under McConnell and Jacob Slonaker, chief group head of enforcement agents in Philadelphia under Leo A. Crossen, McConnell's predecessor, also were indicted together with two scores of alleged bootleggers and truckmen, charged with being accomplices in the alleged conspiracy.

The indictments were returned a few hours after T. Henry Walnut, former assistant United States district attorney, had delivered an address before the City club, in which he narrated the proceedings against McConnell and the grand jury had indicted the 26 others.

Briand Sought U. S. Pact Aimed at Britain, Charge

Former French Premier and Delegations to Arms Meet Under Fire in Chamber of Deputies.

By the Associated Press. Paris, March 25.—A storm of criticism of the attitude of the French delegates to the Washington conference on limitation of armaments and far eastern affairs, and of the treatment they received at the conference broke loose in the chamber of deputies last evening. Aristide Briand, former premier, who at first headed the delegation, was accused of proposing to Charles E. Hughes, the American secretary of state, a Franco-American naval alliance against Great Britain, and there were repeated demands from the extreme right that M. Briand be tried before the senate, sitting as a high court.

M. Briand briefly defended his position when the debate began unexpectedly, it previously having been agreed that the interpellations regarding the Washington negotiations should be deferred until news was received as to the action of the American senate on the ratification of the four-power pact. M. Briand and Rene Viviani, another former premier, had left the chamber believing discussion on the interpellations was temporarily postponed. But shortly afterwards the bitter attacks began. Premier Poincare was unable to come to the chamber. In the emergency he sent Louis Barthou, vice premier and minister of justice, but Albert Sarraut, minister of the colonies who headed the French delegation after the departure of M. Briand from Washington, had already undertaken the defense. He declared that he stood behind his former chief, M. Briand, although he (Sarraut) now was a member of the Poincare government.

The debate was finally adjourned until Friday. News of the American senate's ratification of the four-power treaty did not reach parliament until the session ended.

During the debate, M. de Grandmaison, a deputy of the national bloc, asserted that the French delegation at Washington had contributed little to the good renown of France; that the delegation went to the conference unprepared and that France was treated like a second-rate power. This brought sharp rejoinders from M. Briand and M. Sarraut and a stormy session ensued.
