Boston Girls Real Wrestlers

Cora Livingston and Jane Henry.

Strangler Lewis might learn a few things from Cora Livingston and Jane Henry, who are doing this wrestling match. The "flying mare" is Miss Livingston's pet stunt. She is applying it to Miss Henry, who has a competent defense for nearly all her opponent's stunts. They're Boston girls.

"The Master Eye."
The old injunction to keep your eye on the ball has led to some scientific experiments. Now it comes forth that the player has a best eye and that the detail of fastening the optic on the ball should be a matter solely for his "master eye." It is now determined that every player has one which serves him better than the other in the all-important act of keeping the eye on the ball.

Wrestling Has Sudden Drop With Mat Fans

Rolling Falls Shorten Bouts and Make No Hit With Sportive Folk.

New York, April 6.—The noble art of catch-as-catch-can, largely participated in by retired piano-movers, is dying a lingering death within the confines of the sovereign state of New York. The demise has not been proclaimed with official finality, yet the end is ordained and predestined.

If a coroner's report were rendered, the verdict would be death by an overdose of legislation. The state boxing commission, vested with the power to control wrestling, foisted the system of flying and rolling falls upon the game, and they have eaten into its vitals like a cancerous sore.

Right at the moment wrestling is permitted by law, but you couldn't prove it by the number of shows that are held. It is worth a promoter's financial life to put on a series of bouts nowadays, so abortive to public taste have the flying and rolling falls become.

Matchmaker Is Hopeful.
Until recently one Bill Wellman held down the dual role of matchmaker and promoter of wrestling matches at Madison Square Garden. Just now he is neither.

Bill is a hopeful soul, but he doesn't carry optimism beyond the elastic limit of plain common sense. He was a modern Atlas, but finding the burden irksome stepped from under. Thus far there has been no crash, for the simple reason that interest in the wrestling game is so trivial the sport can float in midair through its own lack of weight.

In all Wellman promoted two shows. The first was a harvest, the second a blight. In the former Stanislaus Zbyszko defended his world's heavyweight championship against Earl Caddock, and although some $25,000 was taken in at the gate it would have been worth many times that amount to wrestling had the bout never been held.

The Pole successfully defended his title, winning two out of three falls with the obnoxious "roll," and 12,000 fans went away vowing never to return. That was the blow that killed father.

Promoter Finishes Second.
A few weeks ago Wellman ventured forth with another offering, and it was a good one. Among those featured were Wladek Zbyszko, Strangler Lewis and Joe Stecher, all former champions. They would have drawn a capacity house under the old order. Not so this time. The sum of $8,000 was in the box office when they counted the returns, and Mr. Wellman finished a bad second on the meeting.

Further, those who did attend the matches were as one in declaring that they would come no more. Mr. Wellman is no man's sap. He put two and two together without any aid whatever from an adding machine and forthwith took it on the run.

Thus far it has been a case of no Wellman, no wrestling. Kindly omit flowers.

Willie Hoppe's Manager Says Billiard Game Must Be Freed From Commercialism to Be Successful

New York, April 6.—R. B. Benjamin, manager of Willie Hoppe, stated tonight that R. E. Bessinger, president of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender company, was responsible for the conditions which prevent Hoppe from trying to regain the world's 18.2 ball-line billiard championship for two years.

In Chicago yesterday Bessinger placed responsibility for the situation on Hoppe's manager. "We suggested to him," Benjamin said "an annual tournament. However, that statement did not prompt Hoppe to decide on retirement. We are not satisfied with the manner in which the sport is conducted. To be a success it must be freed from commercialism. I feel sure Hoppe will not change his mind regarding retirement."

"The facts of having many challenge matches as a result of a tournament means the saving of money for the company. The company donates, nothing towards challenge matches, the players having to stand all expense themselves."

Indian Catcher Hurt in Des Moines Game
Cleveland, April 6.—The Cleveland Indians finally shook off the rain, but the jinx continued on its trail. In the first game the team has been able to play since Saturday, it lost the services of Steven O'Neill, its star catcher.

A game between the regulars and yanigans was scheduled for today at Marshalltown, Ia., the former home of James C. Dunn, president of Cleveland club.

De Palma to Pilot American Car in Auto Classic

Indianapolis, April 6.—With 14 entries in the till and the advance seat race to be held here Tuesday, May 30, far ahead of last year's record breaking figures, the Speedway executives are working at top speed to get everything in readiness for the rush of business in the final two months before the big affair.

Ralph DePalma, that favorite son of speed who turned defeat into fame here in 1912, and then won in 1915, will pilot a home made car, the Duesenberg. He has abandoned the foreign cars he has been piloting with little or no success in the last few years for a speed creation of America, in the hope that he can show his wares to the other drivers at the finish wire.

Our own "Handsome Howdy" Wilcox, who won in 1919, will try to repeat in the Peugeot he has been tuning up over the bricks of the local oval all winter.

Eddie Hearne, the youthful veteran of American speed paths, will show his hairless dome to the fans from the driver's seat of a Duesenberg. Hearne was the first driver to enter the big race and will carry the numeral 1 on his car.

Tommy Milton, who has more titles than any of the pilots, will bring a new car made in California to the race. Milton was victorious here in 1921.

Roush Would Eliminate 3-Year Salary Demand
Cincinnati, April 6.—Eddie Roush, holdout center fielder of the Cincinnati Nationals, is willing to eliminate his demand for a three-year contract, but will insist upon receiving $18,000 for the season. This, according to dispatches received here, was the report Ivy Wingo delivered to Manager Moran when the team reassembled at Indianapolis.
