Ulysses Simpson Grant. April 27, 1822, a man child was born into the family of Jesse Grant, an Ohio tanner and farmer.

Young Grant began early to set up memorials for himself. One was at Resaca de la Palma, another at Monterey. Later he put up quite a sizable one at Belmont, and justified his initials when he wrote a note to his old classmate, Simon Bolivar Buckner, in relation to terms on which the latter might surrender Fort Donelson.

Grant's career as president is hardly less remarkable than his record as a soldier. He fell heir to the confusion of war confounded by the inability of Johnson to restrain the zeal of the radicals, led by Cameron and his associates.

Americans have heard a lot of Thomas Jefferson lately; it will do them no harm to look up Ulysses Simpson Grant, and absorb some of the teachings that may be drawn from his life.

Music and Morals.

The power of music to soothe the savage breast receives a new tribute from Otto H. Kahn, who would like to see a piano in every home.

More Early Marriages.

The notion that hard economic conditions are reducing the number of early marriages in America is exploded by the figures of the last census. In fact, a significant increase is shown in the proportion of married persons among the young folks.

Blackmailing Nebraska.

The Bee published Saturday the facts of the latest chapter of a campaign of blackmail directed against the state of Nebraska.

The Eighth Art.

Those whose delight it is to hold that the world is growing worse can not be speaking of cooking. With this the gradual fade-out of domestic servants may have much to do.

PHILO-SOPHY.

"As a man soweth so shall he reap," does not apply to an amateur gardener.

HER PRIMA DONNA BABY.

"My baby is 15 months old," writes Mrs. H. She was breast fed until she was 8 months old; then she was put on diluted cow's milk till she was 9 1/2 months old.

Nebraska Politics.

Nebraska City Press: When it comes to expressing his opinion on a public question, one in which the people are interested and out of which a political issue is likely to be evolved, Mr. E. H. Howell, who is a candidate for United States senator, is as clear as a bell.

York News-Times: Just why a state should spend millions and the people get mediocre service does not appear plain to the average citizen.
