Bodice vs. Skirt Before the Court

New York.—(Special Correspondence)—These days you can no more expect a bodice and a skirt to share the same sentiments than you can expect a similar agreement between Mr. Lodge and Mr. Johnson.

Many of the crepes, in particular, divide themselves between plain and printed backgrounds. Thus, a black and white crepe waist will take to itself a vivid yellow or green skirt.

Indeed, there are infinite combinations of fabrics going hand in hand with the aforementioned color conflicts. Foulard, which, by the way, is extremely popular, especially in the bold black and white designs, is often touched up with sleeves and panels and trimming of bright green or red crepe.

The pretty dance frock shown today has a corsage of white charmeuse with an original sleeve joined to a skirt of red and black brocade.

Hints On Planting a Lawn

By JEAN TRUE. Perhaps your lawn needs improvement. You feel incompetent to plan and better its arrangement, yet long to do so. You wish to have a part in its planning, but feel you may err in your judgment.

Use plenty of shrubbery. In nature shrubs are found in clumps and along the border in the woods. Arrange shrubs near the house, in order to bring the house and lawn together. This plan helps to secure unity.

The second fundamental principle to be observed in planting a lawn is "variety." This principle may be secured by differences in (1) surface, (2) change of form, (3) curved drives and walks, (4) changing the sky line, (5) different plants in artificial designs, (6) use of perspective, (7) changing groups, (8) darkening the background to give variation in color, (9) open vistas to break the border line, (10) a change in texture in plants, (11) mixing flowers that bloom at different seasons of the year, (12) change of background and foreground.

"Character" is the third principle used in planting a lawn. It may be found in "simplicity, complexity, dignity and boldness." In plan and arrangement; by doing something original, providing it is faultless and of distinct character.

A fourth principle is found in "appropriateness." In planning your lawn try to make it in keeping with the surroundings. Avoid overdoing the lawn by over-elaborateness in design and poor arrangement of colors.

The fifth and last of these principles has been designated as "finish." (1) The designer must plant excellent specimens if he expects results. (2) See that good care is given to lawn and plants; that it is kept clean and orderly. A lawn may be ever so carefully planted, but if neglected soon loses its beauty.

Things You'll Love To Make

Hindu Cut-Out Scarf. A Hindu cut-out scarf is something new for you to make as a runner for your table. Mark out with pencil, or have stamped, a simple design similar to the one shown. Carefully cut out the darkened parts. Cut narrow bias strips of the same material from which the scarf is made or from material of a harmonizing or contrasting color. Bind all the cut-out edges. Bind or overcast the edges of the scarf. A Hindu cut-out scarf looks stunning on a gate leg or library table. (Copyright, 1922.)
