The Metallic Girdle Makes Its Exit

New York.—(Special Correspondence.)—Nowadays if you want to be smart you do not go to the hardware store to do it. The capsule suit of armor which last winter we girded gallantly about our hips is now eclipsed by other types of girdles.

In place of the metallic belts we now have various expedients, among which are to be counted, first of all, leather. Beaded girdles are still in high favor, and there are all sorts of plaits and folds and twists of self-material finishing off the daytime frock. Buckles of mother of pearl, of filigree, of lacquer and of semiprecious stones—these are exploited unceasingly as an accent to this latter kind of girdle. Indeed, never were fancy buckles so much in the limelight.

For the navy serge frock there is nearly always some touch of red, and you cannot do better by such a model than to introduce the red through a leather belt. This is the system which Jenny has pursued in the above model of navy serge embroidered in self-color, and belted with red suede. The collar of white linen with its embroidered red flowers is another affirmation of red. The sleeves follow the schedule of light at the top and flaring below. Also the flare is slashed.

Mrs. Nickerson of Papillion Heads Second District

Mrs. E. S. Nickerson

Mrs. E. S. Nickerson of Papillion, vice president of the Second district, Nebraska Federation of Woman's clubs and a past president of the Papillion Woman's club was elected president of the district at the closing session of the district convention Thursday afternoon in Burgess-Nash auditorium. Mrs. H. M. Hardin, president-elect of the Greta Community club, was chosen vice president; Mrs. O. M. Jones, president of the Omaha Woman's club of Railway Mail Service, secretary; and Mrs. Jean Johnston, chairman of the auditing committee, Omaha Woman's club, auditor.

A resolution was passed for the formation of a federation within the district which will admit all women's organizations. Community meetings will be held for the purpose of solving the individual club problem.

Short reports were given by Mrs. James Davidson, president of the Springfield Woman's club; Mrs. Louis Gould, Waterloo Woman's club; Mrs. W. C. Edmiston, Ralston Woman's club; Mrs. William Maxfield, Papillion Woman's club. Talks on applied education were made by Mrs. Ralph Brown of Crete, state chairman; Mrs. Burton C. Whitmore, Valley, district chairman; Miss Alice Loomis of Lincoln, home economics; Mrs. Philip Potter, Parent-Teacher associations.

Other speakers were Mrs. A. E. Sheldon, Lincoln, director for Nebraska in the general federation; Mrs. Leroy Davis, Lincoln, state chairman press and publicity; Mrs. Irving Kell, Oakland, state chairman of art; Mrs. James T. Lees, Lincoln, state vice president; Mrs. W. E. Miner, state corresponding secretary.

Seventy-five delegates and visiting club women were luncheon guests Thursday noon at the Swift Packing company. They were shown through the administrative branches of the plant, and were told by various department heads of the activities such as athletics, education and welfare.

A son, Gould Roberts, was born April 13 at the Stewart hospital to Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Roberts.

Things You'll Love To Make

Felt Flower Trimming

On the next bag you make, whether it is a sewing, laundry, shoe or shopping bag, put on it a spray of this felt flower trimming. Cut the irregular flower shapes out of differently colored felt; larger pieces for the outer rim, smaller ones for the centers of the flowers. Make two small holes in the center of each flower. Stick wool—black is the nicest—through the holes to fasten the flowers to the bag. (Diag. A.) Use green felt or green silk stitching for the leaves. Black patent leather combined with the colored felt is lovely, too. Few ornaments are more charming than this felt flower trimming. (Copyright, 1922.)

Problems That Perplex

Answered by BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Resigned to Wealthy Parents. Dear Miss Fairfax: I have been a constant reader of your column for several years and am taking advantage of your invitation for advice.

I am an only son of well to do parents in Columbus and my folks own two cars. How can I tell whether the girls that I go with love me for my own sake or for the sake of my money and cars? There is one girl in particular whom I dearly love and my love is returned to all appearances but I can never be quite sure of her sincerity. Oh, Miss Fairfax do you think there are any decent girls any more, they all seem to be influenced by money and car rides now, even the country girls. Please advise me as to what I can do to test her love.—L. W.

Perhaps the girl's pleasure in your company is greater because you have two cars at your disposal. That in itself is all right. It is difficult for most of us to separate people from the things they represent. If you earned these two cars yourself, the girl would have a right to like you just for the pleasures and advantages which can be sliced off your dad's bank roll and not for yourself. It becomes a different and a vicious matter.

The solution of your difficulties, is in your father's hands more largely than in your own. Your parents would educate you and then set you up on your own feet to do for yourself without any help from them, you would be better off in character yourself, and would not be likely to marry a mercenary girl.

A superficial character soon reveals itself. If you will make it a rule to do for a girl only what you can afford to do on your earnings, I think the designing ones will soon fall away, and you will find yourself liked for your own sake rather than your father's money.

Incidentally, I think this will be a good thing for you as well as for your girl friends. You seem very conscious of, and resigned to, your well to do parents. Worry less about testing the girl's love, and more about developing sterling qualities of your own. Like seeks like, you know. If you become strong, enduring, purposeful and true, you will probably not be attracted to a shallow, conniving woman.

You're Wrong, Blue Eyes. "Dear Miss Fairfax: I am a girl of 18 and go with a boy two years my senior. It seems I am only good enough for him when we are alone. But as soon as his boy friends come around he leaves me and goes with them. When I correct him about it he doesn't seem to care. What is your opinion of a fellow like this? BLUE EYES." Aren't you adopting a most proprietary attitude for one of such tender years? I think you are, Blue Eyes. And it seems rather silly to me. You should not be more than just

My Marriage Problems

The Way Madge Conquered Herself and Dicky Left.

Dicky was going to see Edith Fairfax! This was the thought which made me stand motionless for a breathless second or two after I had, at his request, turned out his light. Indeed, I was incapable of motion, for the sound of the girl's name, the knowledge that she was again on Dicky's horizon had been like unexpected blows in the face.

She must have returned from the West Virginia mountains to which I knew she had gone with Aunt Dora Paige for a much-needed rest. I had hoped that after the genuine remorse which had swayed her for her unwitting share in the terrible affair of Junior's kidnapping, the nervous breakdown, which was the result of the awful time, she would yield to the devotion of Dr. Jun Paige, the distant cousin who had been her loving slave since her childhood. I had counted on her forgetting the hopeless love for Dicky which had tortured her and caused me so much mental anguish.

But if she were back in Marvinville I broke off my mental musings at this point to score myself savagely for my folly. All this emotion over the trifling fact that Dicky had asked me to put a Spanish comb which Edith had left at our home in his spring into his bag so that he could give it to her! If the comb had belonged to almost any other woman of my acquaintance I would have thought nothing of the incident. And the very casualness of the request, its openness, ought to have shown me that there was nothing in Dicky's attitude about which I needed to worry.

"What the devil are you doing there in the dark? Can't you find your way out of the room?" Dicky's voice came crossly from the bed.

"I'm going this second," I returned, hastening out of the room, thankful that I had escaped further catemorphism. It was bad enough not to be able to control my jealousy of Edith Fairfax, but to betray it to Dicky as I already unavoidably had done once or twice, was unthinkable.

Try as I might, however, I could not put out the flame of my jealous pain with the fire-extinguisher of common sense. I wonder how many other women have tried the same dampening process only to find the flames flashing up more brightly than ever.

Lucky for Edith, I imagine, that we live in a civilized age. I shudder to think with what subtle poison a medieval ancestress of mine might have impregnated the teeth of the fragile, beautiful comb which I fastened securely in its case and put into Dicky's bag in the early morning after many sleepless hours.

What Madge Wondered.

I tried to comfort myself with the remembrance of the remorse which had been Dicky's for his absence motoring with Edith upon that day Junior was kidnapped. At that moment I knew he had hated her, and I also hugged the remembrance to my mind of the months of quiet devotion from my husband which had been my lot since that time. Upon one memorable day in the Catskills he had declared with emphasis that he was "through" with all pilandering, that he had "gotten his" when Junior was stolen, and that thenceforth I would have to provide all the thrills aside from a humdrum domestic existence.

But—I knew my Peter Pan, and I wondered if so long an imprisonment in the domestic cage, even though it was voluntary, were not palling upon him, if he were not beginning to feel the vague restlessness which generally preceded some escapade, harmless enough in itself, but distinctly trying for me.

There was but one thing to do, however, and that was to speed him on his journey with casual, affectionate cheerfulness, letting no hint of my fears escape me, and I succeeded so well that I think Dicky, with masculine inconsistency, actually resented my cheerful casualness at parting.

"I may stay days," he said, as we drew up to the station.

"There's no reason why you can't stay as long as you like," I responded promptly. Everything is going on swimmingly at home now, and we really don't need you."

"So Long, Old Dear."

"Oh, you needn't rub it in that I'm only a sort of fifth wheel around the manager!" he retorted with a cross intonation which made me suddenly remorseful, but not enough to make me alter the tactics which I was sure were best with my volatile spouse.

"You're the whole four wheels, and also the steering gear," I returned lightly. "But here comes the train. Have a nice trip, and give my love to Her Fluffiness, Edith and Leila."

Into Dicky's eyes sprang a malicious little gleam.

"I'll just do that little thing," he said. "And I'll kiss 'em all around for you in the bargain. Well, so long, old dear. Take the best of care of yourself."

Mallinson-Snyder.

Miss Verna V. Snyder, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilmer A. Snyder, and Herbert Mallinson were married Wednesday evening at the home of the bride's parents, Rev. Arthur Atack officiating. Miss Nell Snyder of Ottumwa, Ia., was maid of honor and Melville Larson was best man. The bride's gown was of white satin and she carried a shower of bride's roses and sweet peas. After an eastern trip Mr. and Mrs. Mallinson will be at the Snyder home until their own is completed.

Dr. Smith Pleads for Christianity

Declares Grouch or Grumbler Not Saved Even If He Is Church Officer.

"There is only one reason for the existence of the Christian church, namely, to save men and women," said Dr. Frank G. Smith, pastor of the First Central Congregational church speaking at the noon Lenten meeting in the Brandeis theater yesterday.

"That is the reason God sent his only son into the world and that is the only mission which will put and keep the thrill of Jehovah in His church on earth.

"A man is not 'saved' just because he has been confirmed by the Catholic, the Episcopal or the Lutheran church, or because he has been received by the ceremony of some other church.

"The human hedgeling and porcupine who grouches and grumbles around all the time is not saved even though he be an officer in the church.

"When a man is saved he is filled with a consciousness of the goodness and love and mercy of the omnipotent God, and is filled with a love for his fellowmen.

"Oh, the change we could bring in Omaha if during the Lenten season, every Christian man and woman could forget church ceremony and go out and save Omaha! Could we not bring joy into thousands of homes torn by domestic infelicities, into thousands of lives blighted by intemperance, drunkenness and the other burning cankers of sin? To all these can come, through Christ, the immortality of which Easter is symbolical."
