Musical Luncheon for Zelaya.

The City Concert club will meet for luncheon Saturday at the Chamber of Commerce, when Don Alfonso Zelaya will be an honor guest and speaker. Don Zelaya combines the virtues of a musician and a philosopher. The son of a former president of Nicaragua, he studied music in a foreign conservatory and has had great success in vaudeville. He is at present appearing at the Orpheum. Don Zelaya is a firm believer in municipal concerts. In his estimation they tend to lessen actual crime in a city. Anyone who is interested in music is invited to attend the luncheon.

Will Name Captains for Music Drive Today

Captains will be appointed and teams organized to carry through the membership drive of the City Concert club which opens on April 24, at a luncheon at the Chamber of Commerce today, according to Mrs. Hester B. Cooper, club president. It is planned to have teams, captained by women, compete in the drive with those headed by men. The campaign will be for 5,000 members at $1 to finance the work of the club for the coming season. With this sum the club will be able to furnish Sunday afternoon hand concerts in the city parks, as well as carry on its other activities, such as "song week," "music week" and to furnish music for special occasions.

Don A. Zelaya, concert pianist, appearing this week at the Orpheum, has been invited to address the club at today's luncheon.

Problems That Perplex

Answered by BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Our Biggest Job. Dear Miss Fairfax: Are boys always jealous when the girls they go with talk to another boy? The boy friend I go with seems never to want me to talk to another boy. But I do it anyway, and then he gets sore. Now, I don't want him to get sore, and I think I can talk to any other boy. Don't you think so?

Now that the girls wear knickers other women make fun of us and call us "no good." Do you think it harm for 15-year-old girls to wear them? The Vinton street women think of nothing else but to talk about the young girls wearing knickers riding bicycles and walking with boys, calling them the "no good" kind. Miss Fairfax, don't you think it better for a girl to walk home with a boy than to go by yourself and always feel safer? This is the first time I've written to you and after awhile I may write again.

Common sense is a good remedy for jealousy. Some people have more common sense than others and therefore exhibit and feel less jealousy.

It really pains me when I hear of women who, without reason, criticism and condemn young girls. But perhaps I shouldn't say this to a young girl, who should be taught to respect her elders. Do what you like to be ladylike and fine, and be polite to the older women. Perhaps they will come to see that wearing knickers and walking home from school with a boy now and then are things not and in themselves. As to all, the biggest job, any one of us has to do is to conduct himself properly without trying to regulate the rest of the community. Let this apply to ourselves and you and I will then hope together that these older women will do the same.

Anxious—I am glad you don't want to appear jealous, for jealousy is an ugly emotion, but I really think you would be justified in telling your boy friend what you have told me. He is not giving you due consideration and you will suffer for it in the end.

Bride's Problems. Dear Miss Fairfax: Would you please tell me in your column if a lady that is married in a suit, and at the court house, or if by a minister, should remove her gloves? Also, should the veil be thrown back over the hat, away from the face?

Thanking you, I am one of your many readers. The bride usually removes the glove from her left hand to receive the wedding ring, but if the ceremony doesn't call for that convention there is no reason why she should remove her gloves. I would suggest that you throw back the veil. It would be a matter of feeling with me not to want my face covered during a sacred service such as the marriage one.

Dear Miss Fairfax: I was engaged to a girl for some time and gave her a valuable engagement ring. She broke the engagement and promised to send my ring as soon as she got it back from a jewelry store. Now she is married and has not sent me the ring, although I have asked her for it many times. Is there any law regarding this and is it possible for me to get the ring? PEEVED.

Consult a lawyer about the legal phase of this matter. There is no doubt the girl should return your ring. If she hasn't the common decency to do it, it seems to me I would drop the matter. If your sense of justice is outraged, and you wish to carry the thing through as a matter of principle, I would first discuss it with the girl's present husband, and, if that is of no avail, see an attorney.

DAUGHTER HAD TO HELP MOTHER

Now Can Do All Her Household Alone Because Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her

Jasper, Minn.—"I saw in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took it because I was having such pains in my stomach and through my back that I could not do my work. I had tried other medicines, but none did me the good that your Vegetable Compound did. Now I am able to do all my work alone while before I had my daughter staying at home to do it. I have told a number of friends what it has done for me and I give you permission to use my letter as a testimonial." — Mrs. JESSIE PETERSEN, Route 1, Jasper, Minn.

There is no better reason for "our trying Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound than this—it has helped other women. So if you suffer from displacements, irregularities, backache, nervousness or are passing through the Change of Life remember this splendid medicine. What it did for Mrs. Petersen it may do for you.

The Vegetable Compound stands upon a foundation of nearly fifty years of service.

My Marriage Problems

Adele Garrison's New Phase of "REVELATIONS OF A WIFE" (Copyright 1922)

The Warning Mother Graham Gave Madge.

I waved my hand gayly to Dicky as I drove away from the station, but there was no heart in the gesture or the smile that accompanied it. I drove home feeling that all the little snips of gloom resident in that end of Long Island had come to make their abode with me as well as some of their relatives from other points of the compass.

For I could not keep from my eyes the vision of Edith Fairfax, returned from a long absence, rested, restored to the exquisite dainty prettiness which is hers, and which just escapes being absolute beauty. Beside the old appeal of friendly comradeship which she always has for my husband, she would have the charm of comparative novelty to him, and I tortured myself with the idea of the joyous welcome which volatile, beauty-loving Dicky, slightly bored with domesticity, would give her.

Lillian's Suggestion. So absorbed was I that I did not realize until a car had whirled past me going in the opposite direction, that the waving handkerchief in the hand of the woman beside the driver must have been a good-bye signal from Katherine, and that under Dr. Pettit's escort she was already on her way to the hospital to begin her delicate and important work of espionage over the man who had so persecuted and terrified Katie.

The little encounter was salutary for me. It jolted me out of the absurd jealousy which was obsessing me, and turned my thoughts to the terrific problem which Lillian was facing, especially to that particular fragment of the tangled skein, the threads to which lay in Katie's fingers. I wondered if there were not some way of getting around Katie's old-world fear of "the awful swear," which the man who had so strangely dominated her had compelled her to take. I resolved to talk to my little maid concerning her oath as soon as I found an opportunity.

I made another resolution, also, as I found myself nearing the old farmhouse we had bought. This was to put all sentimental worry concerning my husband out of my mind. He was not worrying about me—not perceptibly anyway—I said to myself with a little feeling of pique which I tried conscientiously to smother, but which I think persisted in my subconsciousness long after I had banished it from my conscious thoughts, and I meant to take a leaf from his book.

Lillian met me at the door, her eyes worried, but mirthful, nevertheless. "Better go to your mother-in-law in the dining room," she said. "She's on the rampage, and I don't know how long Katie is going to stand the strain without snapping in two."

I hurried to the dining room to find Mother Graham extending a piece of bacon upon the end of a fork, and glaring from it to Katie condemnably.

"Katie's Out-of-Sorts." "Do you call this bacon properly cooked?" she was demanding. "It's positively raw."

"I can't tell you what you're returning Katie sullenly. You say you no like it all crispy, like odes, and now even I feel eet deers vay you no like eet."

"If you had any brains in that head of yours, you'd know that there's a medium between burned bacon and greasy raw stuff like this. Take it away, I don't want any of it—and see if you can make me a piece of decent toast."

My mother-in-law was seated so that she could not see the door in which I was standing. I looked anxiously at Katie's sullen face, for I knew upon what a hair-trigger her temper always was hung. But to my surprise she answered no impertinent word, but meekly picked up the offending plate of bacon and vanished with it into the kitchen. I advanced into the room to find my mother-in-law looking wonderingly at the kitchen door. "Something's the matter with that girl!" she said. "Usually she has a string of excuses as long as the moral law. I hope she isn't sickening for something. You don't suppose she brought back anything contagious from that hole she was in, do you?" She stared at me in sudden fright, evidently working her imagination up to all sorts of horrors. "What nonsense, mother!" I answered lightly, although at her words my apprehensive thoughts flew to Lillian. "Katie's simply out-of-sorts about Jim. But as I want to ask her about that man in the hospital, I'd like her to get calmed down a bit, so you won't mind if I make your toast and bring it in, will you?" "I don't care if you do all her work," Mother Graham answered tartly, "but for your own sake, I'd advise you not to spoil her again as you used to do."

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action, yet always effective. They bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c and 30c.
