

Mayor Dahلمان Promises Munny Concert Support

City to Make Civic Music Appropriation Next Year, He Tells Membership Drive Workers.

If Omaha will support the City Concert club for one more season, the financing of civic music will be cared for in the future with an annual appropriation from city funds, according to Mayor James C. Dahلمان, speaking yesterday at the Chamber of Commerce, opening the club's annual drive for members.

"Here we see a group of people working and expending their energy trying to raise the few thousand dollars needed to carry on this community movement, when the city itself ought to furnish the funds," Mayor Dahلمان said. "The concerts and band music furnished by this organization benefit every person in Omaha as well as our numerous visitors."

Fund to be Set Aside.

"Next year, when Omaha shall have home rule and a right to say how its funds shall be spent, I shall see that an ordinance is passed requiring that a certain minimum sum must be set aside for this purpose."

Other speakers were Charles Gardner, who spoke on "Public Music," and Al Sweet, director of Al Sweet's band, appearing this week at the World theater.

Mr. Sweet recommended a permanent band organization for every city.

Teams to Compete.

Maynard Swartz sang "Friends," and a group of songs from the "Jolly Musketeers" was sung by Beryl Burton, Dorothy Steinbaugh, Harriet Clark Helgren and Helen Rahm Nielsen.

More than 100 women workers have been enrolled under the banner of Miss Blanche Sorenson. They will compete for honors in the membership drive with an equal number of men, working under the direction of Herman K. Mansfield.

The membership campaign will conclude with a free public concert at the Auditorium May 10.

SLEEPY-TIME TALES THE TALE OF NIMBLE DEER BY ARTHUR SCOTT BAILEY

CHAPTER IX. A Spike Horn. Nimble didn't mind losing his spots, when he grew older. He had something else that gave him much more pleasure than they ever had. He had a new toy. Or, to be exact he had two new toys. And everywhere he went he carried them with him.

He never did that again.

He carried them on his head. And he couldn't have left them behind in the woods even if he had wanted to—at least not until he had enjoyed them for a whole season.

Of course you have already guessed that he had a pair of horns.

They were not very big. But neither was Nimble, for that matter. So they suited him well. A little deer like him would have looked queer wearing great, branching horns such as his father owned.

Nimble's horns were merely two spikes which stuck up out of the top of his head in a pert fashion.

It was a proud day for him when an old deer spoke to him and called him "young Spike Horn." About that time the forest folk had begun to speak of him as a "yearling." But there was something about "Spike Horn" that sounded much more important.

Somehow there was a new crop of Spike Horns this summer—Nimble's second summer. And every one of them had been—like him—a little spotted fawn the year before.

At first Nimble had thought it fun to use his new horns to jab anybody that happened to be with him. One day he even stole up behind his own mother and gave her a sharp prod with them.

He never did that again. His mother quickly taught him better. She wheeled and struck smartly with her fore feet.

"There!" she cried. "That's the first time a child of mine has played that trick on me. Let it be the last!"

And it was. Nimble was very careful, after that, to prod only those that didn't mind such pranks.

Luckily he soon found that the other spike horns liked the same sort of fun that he did. They were just as proud of their new horns as he was of his. And (sad to say!) there was a good deal of boasting among them. Each one declared that his own horns were the longest and strongest.

All the spike horns, including Nimble, were forever butting one another in play. And they had just discovered a new sport when Nimble met with what he feared, for a time, was a terrible accident.

Late in the fall, before the deep snows came, both his horns loosened and dropped off his head.

"Oh! Oh!" he cried when he saw what had happened. "I'll never be able to take part in another mock battle again!" For the spike horns had had gay times pretending to fight one another in a most savage fashion.

After Nimble lost his horns, he carefully avoided all his playmates. He didn't want the other spike horns to see him. At last, to his great dismay, one day he came face to face with one of them. They both tried to dodge out of sight. But the other, whose name was Dodger, was not quite quick enough. Before he hid behind a thicket, Nimble saw that he had lost his horns, too!

Then Nimble guessed the truth. He knew why it was that he had managed to keep out of sight of his friends. Every spike horn in the neighborhood had lost his horns. And every one of them had been trying to keep out of sight.

BURNS' Wheat Tone HEALTH BREAD

TODAY we present WHEAT TONE

A new loaf, made from Whole Wheat Flour that is milled in our own Bakery

Made in The Old-Fashioned Way

This loaf is baked in response to a demand for something better than ordinary health bread, which is usually made from a mixture of white flour and bran. This demand came not only from friends and customers, but from physicians.

WHEAT TONE contains ALL of the Bran and the Germ of the Wheat, that healthful element not found in ordinary health bread. The Germ of the Wheat is highly essential because it contains rich mineral salts (an important nerve food), vitamins (for healthy growth) and fats (for building strong tissues). The Bran serves as a laxative.

teriorates too rapidly for flour containing it to be shipped or stored. The Bran is removed because it colors and coarsens the flour.

To get a flour that contained the Germ and ALL of the Bran was a problem. Commercial mills remove the Germ because it de-

We solved this problem by installing a complete flour mill in our own bakery. This mill is the old-fashioned stone process, well known to our fathers. It mills the WHOLE WHEAT with nothing added and nothing taken away. The Wheat is milled daily and we bake from it daily. Thus, we preserve the Germ of the Wheat and ALL of the bran.

WHEAT TONE, therefore, is a new product, different from any other wheat bread you have ever eaten. It should be consistently included in the diet of every adult and child, especially those of sedentary habits.

And don't forget that WHEAT TONE is delicious and flavorful as well as healthful. You've no idea how the WHEAT GERM adds to the flavor.
