Sunshine and Shadow

April just drawing to a close is a month of strange contradictions well illustrating the sunshine and the shadows of life. In the lexicon of students of the seasons, April is described as "a hopeful period" as well as well as "a period or state of emotional inconstancy." It draws these definitions from its alternation of showers and of sunshine and by reason of such alternation is said to be, in the calendar of time, the best representative of life as mortals know it.

Tennyson describing one of his characters whose "windows of the soul"—as the eyes have been called—were alternately filled with smiles and tears, said that "hopes and light regrets make April of her eyes." Fate often seems to "Make April" of our lives, so persistently do the regrets crowd upon the hopes. But the April showers have given us sweet assurance of smiling landscapes and bounteous crops while the sunshine has become the promise of the light that, while often obscured, can never be blotted from the hearts of men.

And Maytime which ever stands as the figure of "the Springtime of Life" is already at hand. Maytime which always suggests youth and life and vigor—Maytime reaping the profits from the sunshine and showers of April—Maytime with its lads and lassies journeying hand in hand through Lover's Lanes while "the same old moon is shining in the same old milky way"—Maytime when lovers prepare to wed, students prepare to graduate, farmers prepare to sow, merchants prepare to trade—Maytime, full of inspiration to the strong, full of encouragement to the weak—Maytime full of Love and Life and Hope!

Then here's a toast to old April and thanks for all the good it has brought into the lives of men. And here's a merry welcome to the Maytime with the sincere hope that it will bring courage to the despondent, health to the sick, happiness to the sorrowing and peace and prosperity to all the world.
