

Charges Against Nurse Dismissed After Two Years

Mrs. Deyo-Peterson, Accused With Dr. Fields in Illegal Operation, to Escape Trial.

After lying dormant almost two years in the office of the county attorney, charges against Mrs. Minnie Deyo, nurse, jointly accused with Dr. Leslie Fields for the death of Ruth Ayers, 20, in August, 1920, were quashed yesterday.

Dr. Fields now is serving one to two years in the state penitentiary for performing an illegal operation on the Ayers girl.

Mrs. Deyo now is Mrs. Chris Peterson, wife of an Iowa farmer, to whom she was married in Council Bluffs in February, 1921. They stated at the time of their marriage that they intended to move into Missouri to live. Mr. Peterson was a farmer from Bryant, Ia.

Two weeks after Dr. Fields was convicted, Francis Watson Alexander, 19, sweetheart and fiancé of the Ayers girl, accidentally shot and killed himself at his home at Hayes Center, Neb. He, too, had been ordered held for trial by the coroner's jury.

No date was set for the Deyo trial.

Witness Dead.

"We decided not to try Mrs. Deyo," said County Attorney Shovel yesterday, "because of the death of young Alexander. His testimony at the trial of Dr. Fields could not be used now in a trial of Mrs. Deyo."

Mrs. Deyo-Peterson was released yesterday from the county jail, which she had been held for almost two years.

Her former home in Omaha was at 2704 North Sixty-fourth street, where the Ayers girl's operation was alleged to have been performed.

New Form of Permits for Liquor Withdrawal Adopted

Washington, May 2.—Adoption of a new form of permit for the withdrawal of liquor from bond and new physicians' prescription blanks, designed to stigmatize the possibility of either document being counterfeited, was announced by Commissioner Haynes. These new forms, Mr. Haynes said, are printed on specially designed sensitized, water-marked paper and from an engraved plate bearing a water mark seal of the Treasury department and the word "prohibition" water marked on each.

As a still further protection against counterfeiters, he declared, the prohibition bureau has adopted a machine which resembles a check protector which will impress upon each withdrawal permit the amount of liquor to be released to prevent their being raised after issuance.

Governors of U. S. Reserve Banks to Discuss Problems

Washington, May 2.—Governors of the 12 federal reserve banks of the country will meet today with the federal reserve board for their annual discussion of the administration policies of the federal reserve system. Particular interest attaches to the meeting in view of President Harding having let it be known that he would look with favor upon the attendance of Governor Strong of New York at the proposed international conference of heads of state. No informal invitation has yet been received, officials said, asking the board to send a representative to such a conference, but it is believed that such a request is on the way.

Burr Man Found Slain With Bullet Wound in Head

Trail of Blood Followed to Room of Fellow Townsman—Sheriff Holding Inquest.

Nebraska City, Neb., May 2.—In response to a call from the village of Burr, this county, saying Joshua Howard had been murdered at that place Sunday, Sheriff Fisher and other officials yesterday went to Burr and began an investigation.

The body of Howard was found lying in a pool of blood in his woodshed. He had been shot in the back of head. A trail of blood, the officers said, led to the house of George Flessner, and in a room on the second floor were found blood-stains.

Flessner was brought here and is in the county jail. He was questioned by County Attorney Henke but denied knowledge of the crime. Sheriff Fisher began an inquest on the body at Burr this evening, but adjourned the inquiry for further examination of witnesses today.

The Dancing Master

By RUBY M. AYRES. (Copyright, 1922.)

(Continued from yesterday.) Elizabeth did not answer. She had a premonition now of what was coming, and Mrs. Mason went on, still patting her arm condescendingly. "And now, Elizabeth, I want to talk to you about something very private. I feel that in view of the fact that you are my niece, and that your circumstances are so altered, I can do so quite freely."

"I have never misrepresented my position to you—you always knew that I could not afford to do what I would wish, either for you or for my own Dolly. But now, as your future is so wonderfully bright, and if, as I hear it reported, you are to eventually marry Mr. Farmer—"

She broke off, as Elizabeth jerked her arm away. Mrs. Mason laughed nervously. "Silly child! Is that a clever little girl! You have been such a secret little girl! Why, he must be almost a millionaire, and so—"

Elizabeth sprang to her feet, cutting short the request for money she knew was about to follow. "There was something pitifully tragic in her flushed cheeks and angry eyes, as she broke out vehemently: 'Oh, I think it is a hateful—hateful world! It's only money, money, everywhere, that people care about.'"

The color rose to Mrs. Mason's face, her pretense of friendliness vanished; she had not imagined that Elizabeth would see through her so quickly. "And you! Why are you to talk about money?" she demanded icily. "What have you done, may I ask, but live at the expense of other people ever since my poor brother died? Insolent girl! Knowing what I know, it is an outrage for you to dare to adopt this attitude with me. First you come as a pauper to my house, then you run away with a common dancing master, and live on his charity until he tires of you, and passes you on to the next fool, who is taken in by your pretended innocence!" She had worked herself into a fine passion; she had never liked Elizabeth, but she could have killed her with the utmost pleasure for the swiftness with which she had seen through this pretense of friendship. "People say that you will be famous!" she raved on. "Famous! Yes! For the life you are leading! For the scandalous way in which—"

She stopped, as the door opened and Dolly walked into the room. She looked from her mother to Elizabeth, and with understanding filled her eyes. Elizabeth was marble white, and Mrs. Mason was scowling with rage, though she tried hard to control herself as her daughter shut the door and came forward. "How do you do, Elizabeth?" Elizabeth ignored her proffered hand; she turned away. "I am just going," she said. "I am sorry I came. I might have known that I should only be insulted."

Dolly caught her hand. "What is the matter? Oh, don't go! I want to speak to you. What has mother been saying?" She looked angrily at Mrs. Mason. "What have you been saying to her?" she demanded. "It is Elizabeth who has been saying things to me," was the quick reply. "She accused me of borrowing money from her, and so—"

Dolly laughed. "Well, it was the truth, wasn't it?" she said calmly. "That's why we asked her here." Mrs. Mason spread her hands helplessly. "With such a daughter, and such a niece," she began, but Dolly cut her short. "Please go away, mother, and leave me talk to Elizabeth."

Mrs. Mason began to refuse. "It's coming to a pretty state of things when I am ordered about by my own child, after the way I have slaved . . . . "Oh, go away, mother!" Dolly said impatiently. Mrs. Mason flounced out of the room, and a little silence followed. Then Elizabeth said with an effort: "Please let me go! I am sorry I came. It's no use us talking at all. I haven't got any money, and if I had," she added, with a touch of passion, "I would never lend it to your mother after the way she has insulted me."

"Mother insults everyone if she can't get anything out of them," Dolly said calmly. "It doesn't do to be any notice of her. It's not money I want, anyway," she laughed; "not this time, at any rate."

She looked at Elizabeth with searching eyes. "Elizabeth, will you answer something?" "Yes, if I can."

"Is it true that you are going to marry—Neil Farmer?" "No."

Dolly caught her by the shoulders; there was a painful eagerness in her eyes. "Is that the truth? Will you swear it's the truth?" "Yes," said Elizabeth. (Continued in The Bee Tomorrow.)

If Kidneys Ache or Bladder's Weak

Take Roots and Herbs to Flush Kidneys and Wash Out Irritating Acids.

If your kidneys hurt or bladder bothers drink lots of water, and remember these weaknesses result from uric acid. It is the duty of the kidneys to remove waste material from the system. If they become overworked and sluggish they fail in their efforts to filter and strain all the waste poisons from the blood. Practically all rheumatism, back ache, dizziness, constipation, sleeplessness and bladder weakness come from clogged kidneys.

To have strong, healthy kidneys, capable of easily and normally filtering from your blood 500 grains of Toxins (Poisons), which they should do every 24 hours, you simply must keep them clean and active and the acids neutralized so that your kidney and bladder troubles will be ended. Then you can forget you have a set of kidneys or a bladder. Just a natural stimulant is necessary. Simply get a bottle of Dr. Carey's PRESCRIPTION NO. 777 (Tablets or Liquid) made from harmless roots, herbs and salts. Take right after eating. You will be delighted with the results it will bring.
