Things You'll Love To Make

A handy little accessory to a shade is this pretty BEAD SHADE PULLER. Cut a piece of thin wire, that holds its shape, long enough to make a circle three inches in diameter. String wooden beads on it, leaving small spaces between the beads. Paint the beads in any attractive color you like. Twist the ends of the wire together to form the circle. String a piece of worsted back and forth between the beads, crossing each time in the center of the circle. Weave in and out of the strands at the center to form a small web. Twist a couple of strands of the worsted together and tie to the top of the circle so as to attach it to the shade. Finish your attractive BEAD SHADE PULLER with two tassels tied to the bottom.

Robertson will have six guests, as will Judge and Mrs. Irving Baxter, and Dr. and Mrs. J. J. McMullen. There are a number of Dutch treat parties planned. Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Connor will have a party of six and Mr. and Mrs. Tom Fry will have six. Others who have made reservations are K. W. Jones, L. C. Gibson, E. M. Durand, W. C. Ramsey, I. Sibbern, W. C. Fraser and D. W. Exley.

Early Evening.

Still, golden shadows reaching out To kiss the warm, green sod; Dear peace, familiar benison, These finger prints of God. The sun ship spreads great, painted sails, And drifts across the sky To anchor in the harbor bay, Where feathered clouds flame by. And harbor lights, with silver, prick Across that voiceless sea. To mark the moorings, as the night Folds down exquisitely. The shadows fade; the ship no more Enchants the human sight. But from the masthead swings the moon In lovely, argent light.—Faith Baldwin.

Problems That Perplex

Two C. E. Girls: You are fortunate to be giving your party in May, for no month lends itself more beautifully to entertainment. The fruit blossoms, the iris, bridal wreath, snowballs and other flowers are in full bloom for your decorations. If the party is open, giving a sense of freedom to the affair. Refreshments are easily provided, for ice cream and cake are always welcomed on a warm evening. I would plan progressive games. You may object to prizes, but if you keep track of the winners (giving each one a punch on a tally card for each game won), and at the end of the evening award a modest prize to the one who has won the most games. For one game give five or more minutes, in which the guests are to form words from "Christian Endeavor," using no letter in any one word more times than it appears in the key words. You can see many words at a glance—deer, neat, and onion, etc. Or, if you wish to particularly compliment your guest of honor, have them make words out of her name. Another game which is fun in a crowd is "Passing the potato." Place a bucket or a basket at the head and foot of each line of players (dividing the crowd into two sides). The game is to pass 10 potatoes from end to end, through each person's hands. Give a winning punch to the first to reach each person in the winning line. You will think of other games to add to these, like "Going to Jerusalem." Or, if your wish to your C. E. president is going away, it would be interesting to make a book for her. Clip up old magazines and paste pictures into her book, writing below them messages to your president. Have each person prepare a

Dinner Dance to Open Country Club Season

The Country club will hold its formal opening Saturday evening with the usual dinner dance. An open air dance floor has been built onto the southeast corner of the club house, and the lounge inside has been re-decorated for this season. The woodwork has been painted cream, and new crotonas and lamps in rose and blue are in evidence.

Among those who will entertain Saturday evening are Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Fraser, who will have as their guests the Messrs. and Mesdames A. L. Reed, J. L. Kennedy, W. J. Foye, W. H. Wheeler, L. F. Crofoot, C. T. Koomer and Mr. C. J. Hill. Mr. and Mrs. Mosher Colpeter will entertain the Messrs. and Mesdames Ward Burgess, Glenn Wharton and W. T. Burns. Mr. and Mrs. George Kelly will have 12 in their party. With Mr. and Mrs. George Thummel will be the Messrs. and Mesdames Barton Millard, Walter Roberts, Louis Clarke, Charles Metz, C. B. Wood, Ross Towle and Louis Meyer. Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Huntley will have a party of 10, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Redick will have a foursome. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Beatty will entertain the Messrs. and Mesdames Windsor Megeath, Frank Keogh, Edward Creighton, Miss Gladys Peters and Dr. Robert Schrock. There will be a Dutch treat party of 16. W. Farnam Smith will entertain 10 guests and Guyver Yates will have a foursome. R. C. Howe will have five in his party. Others who will have guests will be Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Huntley, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Doorly, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Hamilton and F. H. Gaines.

Common Sense

Are You a "Good Scout" Girl? Too many girls wait to be thought "good fellows"—"good scouts." Believing that men like that sort best, they cultivate a sort of brazen bravado, a blasé freedom of mind. But men seldom marry that sort of girl. A "good fellow," "good scout" girl is all right to play with, and to go about with, for she does not demand as much in the way of attention as some girls do. But it is not often that one of the

My Marriage Problems

Adele Garrison's New Phase of "REVELATIONS OF A WIFE" (Copyright 1922)

The Explanation Lillian Gave to Madge. "Now, how in tarnation did Smith get that rope ladder up there in the first place?" Lillian stood beneath Katie's window, gazing upward at Tom Chester's flashlight traveled up and down the side of the house. "Just stand still a minute, Mrs. Graham. Will you take this flashlight? I have another." Tom Chester spoke quickly, but with something in his voice which made me guess that he had some theory of the answer to Lillian's question. And as he pressed the flashlight into my hand—a bit of thoughtfulness which stung a bit of my pride—peeped from another gleamed from his hand and traveled with him around the corner of the house.

"That's a good boy," Lillian whispered approvingly. "Has ideas and initiative, qualities whose fairy owners are often absent at christenings. Wonder what he's up to now." Her question was quickly answered by young Mr. Chester's reappearance. He was breathing a bit heavily, as if excited and hurried, but his voice was cool, even casual. "I think I've found his trick, Mrs. Underwood," he said. "There's a big horse-chestnut around here at the side, and I'm sure I can reach the end of the veranda from one of the branches. And once there it's comparatively easy, though slippery, to get to the part of the roof where this is fastened. I'll just skin up that way now." "Pardon me, dear child, but you'll do nothing of the kind," Lillian interposed decidedly. "I'll have no broken necks or even collarbones upon my conscience. There's a long ladder in the barn which they use for picking apples. Here's the key to the padlock of the barn. You can't fail to see it when you once get inside the door."

Parents' Problems

How can harmony be preserved between two brothers, aged 9 and 11, who are very unlike in temperament; the older being quiet and fond of books and the younger one boisterous, liking sports. Cultivate a natural respect in the boys. "John Halifax, Gentleman" would be a good book for the younger boy to read. Impress upon the older boy the necessity for being patient and loving in his dealings with his boisterous brother, and the younger to respect and admire his studious brother.

A Silly Song

By A CUCKOO BIRD. When any chap that hasn't got a cent goes roaming through this world below and never in one place can be content, but wants to be forever on the go. The folks he moves among say he's a hobo and set their hungry dogs upon his trail and the cops take one look at his shabby garments and promptly throw him in the county jail. But when a rich man has the same affliction, we say he is a traveler of fame; we have him entertain our clubs at luncheons and the papers print his picture and his name, but the difference between a tramp and tourist, as far as I can see, is very small and if the tourist is a hobo, he is living he'd be the biggest hobo of them all.
