Farmer and the Tariff.

The tariff is to be made an issue in the election this year, warns Senator Underwood, free trade leader of the democratic party in the senate. His challenge will be accepted by the republicans. Senator Underwood also insists on having unlimited debate, that the passage of the bill may be delayed as long as possible.

In one of his addresses on the floor Senator Underwood belittled the statement that the farmers feel the effect of foreign competition, and asserted that the Atlantic seaboard is fed from its own production, and that the effort to secure a protective duty on farm products is merely an effort to compel the 30,000,000 people of the New York and New England region to pay tribute to the farmers of the west.

A detail or two may interest the farmers. Imports of eggs were valued at $7,851,523 in 1920; butter, $18,646,459, and cheese, $5,657,035. Exports for that year were: Eggs, $13,569,144; butter, $10,142,403; cheese, $5,054,253. Of potatoes imported in 1920 the value was $12,467,281, and of wheat flour, $8,668,874.

Senator Ashurst of Arizona, a democrat, has declared in favor of a tariff that will protect the farmer as well as the manufacturer. That is just what the republicans are trying to establish, and just what the democrats, led by Underwood of Alabama and Hitchcock of Nebraska, are trying to prevent.

The art of pageantry finds its home this week in Richmond, Va. As a part of the observance of old home week, a musical spectacle will be given, starting with the virgin queen, Elizabeth, who gave the state its name, running through the landing at Jamestown, the incident of John Smith and Pocahontas, Bacon's rebellion, the French and Indian war, Patrick Henry's speech, the vote for independence, the Clark expedition to Vincennes and Detroit, the surrender at Yorktown, General Lee and the battles of the confederacy, ending with the world war and a vision of the future.

An idea of the popularity of the public forum is gained from the estimate that Everett Dean Martin, director and founder of the Cooper Union Forum of the People's Institute of New York City, addressed a total audience of more than 86,000 in the past year. The twenty-fifth anniversary of the forum movement is to be celebrated there this fall, so this can not be considered any new thing.

It is not every enterprise that would thus finance a competitor, and care ought to be taken to enforce the stipulation that this gentleman adheres to his pledge to handle only commodities that are not now handled by the government barge line.

"Now, them guys ain't nothin' to me. I handle bigger stuff than that every day," said the youngster who carried the Babe Ruth telegram to Judge Landis' office. And that is the way a whole lot of people felt about the incident.

missioner has notified assessors to scrutinize returns already made, and where the individual has made return at higher than the rate agreed upon to make the necessary adjustment. This settlement of the controversy is happily reached by the application of a common sense rule to determine what should be taxed, and means considerable relief to holders of building and loan shares, who had looked ahead to a rather stiff levy on their savings.

Shifting the Decimal Point.

Whatever happens in Europe, one point is agreed upon. There must be a general devaluation of paper currency before health is restored to commerce and industry where it now is languishing. It was brought out before the National Chamber of Commerce meeting at Washington last week that American capital to the extent of almost a billion dollars has gone to Europe within a little over 12 months, in the form of loans to governments and private enterprise.

Nothing in this indicates an intention or desire to abandon the people over here in their time of need. At the moment J. P. Morgan is in consultation with European financiers, looking to the conditions on which a great American loan can be floated. Lloyd George, leaving Genoa, notified the Russians that the gap they left in the European family of nations is slowly being filled, the economic void is closing, and that recovery can be made secure without them. This is admitted, but it is equally obvious that until the money situation is cleared up, and a more reasonable relation between the gold standard and the paper issues is brought about, the effort at recovery will be seriously delayed.

Doubleless such a process will be a painful one, yet it will bring benefit to all. In Germany it will be of particular benefit, for, no matter how energetic and frugal the people there may be, they are feeling the effect of the disproportionate status of their money. Purchase of raw materials and of food supplies is difficult, because of fluctuations in value of the mark.

When the Germans, the Poles, the Austrians, the French and other peoples who have inordinately inflated their money resolutely accept the deflation, and let themselves down to a solid foundation, the further processes of restoration will follow in natural sequence.

Nebraska Looking Ahead.

A symposium published in The Bee today is recommended to all for reading. In it will be found the unbiased opinions of a number of editors of newspapers scattered in every section of the state, so that the review is as near representative of general conditions as could be obtained. The verdict is that the crop prospect is excellent, and that the business outlook is good. Little need exists to waste words in interpreting this. For the sake of such as are unacquainted with the spirit of the Nebraska farmer, and therefore not advised of his faculty for recuperation, The Bee will point out that the forecast means that prosperity is with us once more. Nebraska's fields are an unending source of wealth; the farmer has encountered adversity in about every known form, and has risen above it, superior to circumstances. His courage is indomitable, his energy exhaustless, and his skill established. The fertile acres of the state, plus the farmer's ability and favorable weather, annually produce around half a billion dollars' worth of food for humanity, and that is a respectable sum, even in these times. This season will be no exception, at least the spring promise is encouraging, and nobody need worry about the Nebraska farmer going out of business or repudiating his debts. He will take care of politics, as he always has, after his own fashion, but will look after the real business of farming first.

The art of pageantry finds its home this week in Richmond, Va. As a part of the observance of old home week, a musical spectacle will be given, starting with the virgin queen, Elizabeth, who gave the state its name, running through the landing at Jamestown, the incident of John Smith and Pocahontas, Bacon's rebellion, the French and Indian war, Patrick Henry's speech, the vote for independence, the Clark expedition to Vincennes and Detroit, the surrender at Yorktown, General Lee and the battles of the confederacy, ending with the world war and a vision of the future. Certainly this is an attractive way to recall history.

An idea of the popularity of the public forum is gained from the estimate that Everett Dean Martin, director and founder of the Cooper Union Forum of the People's Institute of New York City, addressed a total audience of more than 86,000 in the past year. The twenty-fifth anniversary of the forum movement is to be celebrated there this fall, so this can not be considered any new thing.

Who is satisfied is lost, to judge by recent political events.

Nebraska Smiles Again

Crop and Business Conditions put Stop to Singing of the Blues. Beatrice Daily Express. Clark Perkins—Spring crop prospects in Gage county are the brightest for years. General business conditions show marked improvement and optimism present in general building activity, headed by a $200,000 hotel, with the Harbison Water Power project, which is nearing completion, is a stimulant to industrial activity. The outlook is bright and prospective, unexcelled by anything I saw on recent trip over central Nebraska.

Leitch World. Charles R. Kupke—Business conditions are practically back to normal in this community. Crop prospects are excellent, but our people are not keeping entirely upon the growing crops. The remedy is to be found in the care of live stock and in the production of eggs and poultry. That an average of six hundred cases of cream are shipped daily, besides a large quantity of eggs and poultry.

Holdrege Progress. O. J. O'Shea—Crop conditions in Phelps county are reported as being as good as expected after an abnormally dry season. Up to within six weeks ago, this county has had practically no moisture since last July and many of the crops are present in a stunted appearance. Since the rains of the past few weeks, conditions are considerably improved and, while we do not want to appear optimistic, we believe that, with the more normal amount of moisture during the balance of the growing season, we are warranted in saying that the result will be very close to an average crop. Rain is needed at this time. The present crop is being improved in business conditions, in spite of the fact that farmers generally are busy getting in their corn.

Columbus Telegram. Growing crops, wheat, oats, rye and alfalfa, are regarded by farmers as better than average for this time of the year. Merchants are all hopeful regarding business prospects, but the present volume of business is not large. The best argument in support of optimism is the statement of all Columbus banks that during the past six months there has been no bank failure during the preceding year and a half.

Atkinson Star Journal. William Akert—The prospects of a bumper crop of small grain is very promising in Brown county. Fall grain is good; corn is late in planting, due to a backward spring; early potatoes are coming nicely; business is most thriving; many homes and business buildings to be erected this summer.

Falls City Journal. Aaron Davidson—Horticultural and agricultural conditions here are the best in several years. We are having the first peach crop in eight years and the wheat and fruit crops, in general, are better than for some time. The corn crop, though somewhat late, is estimated at ninety-five per cent. A good rain will make it nearly perfect. Bankers here declare business improved, and that the year last year as the result of farmers improved conditions.

Lexington Pioneer. In the vicinity of Lexington, crop conditions are fair and with rain will be good. Business is fair and gradually improving.

Gordon Journal. Dwight P. Griswold—Big acreage of grain and potatoes; condition of small grain normal; number of hogs on farms showing increase and good profit; business is improving; a bumper crop not much left in country to sell. Winter loss of cattle on ranches small and calf crop good. Prospects for fall greatly improved.

Grand Island Independent. A. F. Buehler—Business men generally regard commercial conditions improving slowly. As to crop prospects for the present year, estimates vary. Farmers generally are not very optimistic at the present time, owing to the fact of moisture both above and beneath. The rainfall has been materially below the normal in this vicinity, but the outlook is bright, in addition to which there is no reserve or submergence.

Oakland Independent. C. G. Carlton—Usual acreage of corn was planted a little later than usual. Oats are not looking very good, owing to the lack of moisture, and wheat has grown very little here. Business and financial conditions are improving gradually. The work of paving eighty blocks is progressing nicely.

Central City Nonpariel. R. L. Clinton—Crop conditions are fine. Five thousand bushels of potatoes have been planted under irrigation, and plenty of moisture and farmers all report prospects are fine. Business is improving, with two new farms to open in June. Small tract farming is coming on the front rapidly. Land is worth $300 per acre.

Bayard Farmers' Exchange. Max Wilcox—Business conditions in Bayard have been very near normal within the past sixty days and money is looser than it has been for over a year. Prospects were never better for a bumper crop and conditions are more favorable for growing many farm women here for years. Local banks show a prosperous condition and everything points to a return of prosperity this fall.

Norfolk Press. Marie Weekes—Business, like the fields, is taking on a new color of hopeful optimism of a new crop and a market that will leave the producers with returns sufficient to justify their labors. The banks find it easier to lend money. People are paying their taxes and are satisfying other obligations. Retailers report an increase in sales. The building season is opening promisingly and northeast Nebraska looks forward to a year of more steady employment for its town workers and to a harvest of farm products that will mean hope for the farmer. The price of this portion of the state, if the tillers of the soil are paid a fair market price. The fruit outlook was never more promising. Corn is about fifty per cent planted and the grain in the fields are green and beautiful. Butter, eggs, small vegetables, milk and cream give the farm wife money with which to run her household. Many of the Nebraska city and town folk report as high as from 500 to 2,000 young chicks hatched and some of them well on the way to the trying stage. This is God's garden. It is no more magnificent in blossom and tender green. Never yet has it completely failed us and this year promises a harvest richer than ever before.

Fairbury Journal. W. F. Cramb—Jefferson county wheat will need rain soon in spots, generally in fine condition and much better than adjoining counties. There has been more bloom in the spring in the southern than the northern part of the county. Reports from adjoining counties are that wheat is badly damaged. Corn is all planted and in fine condition and alfalfa is a great crop. This is the best alfalfa county in the state. Business conditions are improved somewhat but held back by high taxes. The outlook is bright and the prospect for a bumper crop and farmer's profit are bright. The gain without robbing another duty of more than a few moments' time.

Gothenburg Independent. C. W. Kotkin: Lately we have looked over some of the finest fields of growing wheat that we have ever seen; just across the road or a little further on some of the poorest of prospects were seen. Difficult to estimate on the yield. Corn looking conditions improving, but the progress is slow so that merchants and farmers can figure with confidence without robbing another duty of more than a few moments' time.

Blair Pilot. Don C. VanDeusen: Crop conditions are good in Washington county, but we need rain especially on the east side of the county, a good shower having fallen on the west side a few days ago. Winter wheat is looking very well. The corn is pretty well all planted and some is up. The prospects are also good for a big fruit crop. Business conditions are steadily improving, but cannot be good until the farmers can get a decent profit for what they raise.

Nebraska Notions

Norfolk Press: There would be no good roads in Nebraska today were it not for the federal aid system, whereby for every dollar appropriated by the national government Nebraska puts up another dollar. It was not possible for Otoe county to have uniformly good roads until trunk lines were built by state and federal aid money, simply because to have roads there must be money to encourage and maintain high-ways worthy of the name, what sort of roads would there be in Sarpy county, for instance, where high-ways are so numerous? Sarpy county has the opportunity to draw on the common "pot" there would be mere trails through the smallest county in the state and traffic would be reduced to the minimum.

Stromsburg Herald: We who think that the children of today are so much worse than those of our day should look to the opinion expressed by Miss Towse of the Otoe county school who has taught so long in that school that she now teaches the children of her former pupils, and finds the children of today are much sadder than their fathers and mothers when they were children. She says that the children would have different standards if we had people and more respect for the law, but that we are living in an age of "getting by" and cut corners whenever we can. We are all doing things we should not, and then expect the children to be perfect. Let's take a lesson from that fact and remember that we are the pattern for the grownups of tomorrow, and let us set them an example that will lead them to better things.

Scottsbluff News. George Grimes: Everything is favorable in the irrigated North Platte valley for good crops. Business is making a steady recovery, and merchants are aggressively seeking it. This region expects to start this year with a second period of growth that will be even more impressive than that of the last decade.

Hebron Register-Champion. Albert J. Nacker: Merchants report business conditions steadily increasing, both in amount of sales and in cash transactions. Crop conditions are not favorable at this time, due to lack of moisture. Rain is needed soon to break the drought that is cutting in on wheat production.

Pierce Call. C. R. Brande: Merchants here report business much better than a year ago at this time. With 90 per cent and hogs at $9.50 and cattle bringing a good price, times are bound to steadily improve.

Aurora Republican. C. A. Carlson: All is well in Hamilton county. Crop conditions are very favorable at the present time, although a little backward on account of late spring. Small grain is showing a steady recovery, and abandonment. Business conditions are getting better slowly, and a more hopeful feeling is very much in evidence.

Norfolk News. With most of the corn planted, and a small amount of wheat going, prospects in northeastern Nebraska are unusually good, though a little rain would help. Reports from merchants and bankers indicate a steady improvement in business, and there is a general feeling of optimism for the future.

Hastings Tribune. Adam Broede: Crop conditions in this part of Nebraska are good. Of course, there are patches of winter wheat that will not amount to much, but as a whole it is good. Business is under way and a big building campaign is well under way. Winter wheat crop gives promise of being a good year for all.

St. Paul Phonograph. J. F. Webster: Crop conditions are favorable here, but rain is needed very much to insure continued satisfactory conditions. Business conditions are growing better right along and people are optimistic over the outlook for the future. Large shipments of livestock from this section bring back considerable cash and that has relieved the money situation nicely.

Keamey Hub. A. M. Brown: Crop outlook indicates a good year for wheat, but spotted. Crop conditions are promising. Potato industry is exceptionally promising. Business conditions are better than for some time. The beginning of year, not super, but indicating a strong underlying condition. Development activities in Keamey greater than any year in last 30.

Nebraska City Press. J. H. Sweet: Nebraska city and Otoe county have not suffered from depression to the extent that there has been any near approach to sorrowful misgivings or loss of confidence. Crops were never more promising than now. "Business is good, thank you. There is abundant faith and well grounded hope. There is a brisk, cheerful sense of things present and things to come.

Gothenburg Independent. C. W. Kotkin: Lately we have looked over some of the finest fields of growing wheat that we have ever seen; just across the road or a little further on some of the poorest of prospects were seen. PERNICIOUS ANEMIA.

Some of those who have been faithful to this column may remember that many years ago we wrote on severe anemia, due to septic conditions of the mouth. That article was based on studies made by Dr. William Hunter. In substance he held pyorrhea and septic conditions of the gums responsible for many of the cases of severe anemia. He has recently given a British Medical association address in which he, as the result of 20 years' study of severe anemia, sets forth views and opinions that are worthy of study.

What is ordinarily called pernicious anemia he calls glossitic anemia. This disease starts in the summer between July and September. The first attack begins with a sore throat, and no other symptoms are noted unless it is looked for. The tongue may be red, raw, beefy, swollen, cracked, sore. He says that scald cankers on the tongue, applied to the tongue at this season, should be regarded with suspicion.

The attack of sore tongue lasts a few days, gets better, and recurs in about the same manner. Careful examination may show the following: Slight jaundice, fever, high colored urine, anemia. There may be some stomach or sore bowels. After September these symptoms disappear and the subject feels well. The following summer, about the same time, the symptoms reappear, and last for about the same length of time. They are of the same pattern as the first year, but they are materially worse.

For instance, the anemia may drive the hemoglobin as low as 40 per cent; the jaundice may be definite and the fever may be high enough to be noticed by the careless. In the autumn the conditions again become normal. At the time of the third attack in the following winter, the anemia is definite enough and symptoms are severe enough to excite suspicion and to start the blood examinations which establish the diagnosis.

In times past the diagnosis of pernicious anemia has not been made until some time after the onset of this third attack. In other words, the subject has had the disease at least two years before it was diagnosed or even suspected. This is a very important point. Since Dr. Hunter thinks a good deal can be done in the way of treatment of what he calls glossitic anemia—called by others pernicious anemia. And that leads to the next practical point made by Dr. Hunter. Absorption of infection from around the teeth through the gums results in what he calls septic anemia.

Tomorrow's story will deal with septic anemia. Many cases of pernicious anemia develop septic anemia also. Hunter says either form of anemia is capable of killing. When they are combined the combination is absolutely mortal. He further says when the septic form is removed from the combination the glossitic form left is milder and has a better prognosis. The chance of what he calls septic anemia is great. By that he means quick and great, but time limited improvement. The chance of ultimate and permanent recovery he is more guarded in talking about.

The method of treating this septic combination is the removal of all the teeth, good and bad, and hygiene of the mouth. The earlier this is done in glossitic anemia the greater the hope of cure.

An Active Life Advised. Mrs. O. H. E. writes: "I. Please print a good diet for an expectant mother." "2. What is your advice for a stubborn case of constipation?" "3. What kinds of exercise are not too strenuous for the expectant mother?" REPLY.

1. An expectant mother should eat about what any normal woman should eat, but in an active life, she should eat more. One theory that she must eat for two. This has done harm because it has caused some women to overeat until they were unable to digest. Another is that the woman eat sparingly lest the baby be large and her labor difficult. This has caused some women to eat too little and thus imperil the supply of breast milk.

2. Unless plenty of bran, vegetables and fruit and water will correct the habit the case is one for the doctor. 3. I think an expectant mother who will lead an active life, walking, horse-back riding, golf, swimming should help, not harm.

Salt Does You No Good. Mrs. J. J. H. writes: "I. Is taking a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of salt before breakfast harmful to a woman in pregnancy? I am doing this because my blood is bad. If you know of anything for the blood kindly let me know." "2. Has the following anything to do with my condition? Every time I sit down for any length of time my legs get that dead feeling—as I would say, 'It falls to sleep.'" REPLY.

1. This medication does you no good. I do not know what you mean by "my blood is bad," but whatever you mean, taking salt is not helping you any. Many pregnant women get dropsy from Bright's disease. If such women take salt as a medicine, they will be harmed thereby. 2. You press on the nerve. Sit in an upholstered chair.

Omaha, May 18.—To the Editor of The Bee: I read with care your editorial relative to the action of the Grand Island conference and can say that your statement represents the keynote of the progressives at that conference. The four reactionaries that were present represented Sorenson and Edmisten, the betrayers of the confidence of the great mass of progressive voters in the state of Nebraska. As expressed by C. A. McDonald, "they were like Judas in their betrayal, but lacked the courage to go out and hang themselves."

Edmisten's fling, or challenge, to the Grand Island conference is just what might be expected. Any gentleman who, in a committee, such as an offense ought to have self-respect enough left to let his henchmen finish the work. Now the word goes out that if the progressives deal it will be caused by those who do not believe in dirty deals. The great mistake made at the Grand Island convention was the election of Sorenson as campaign manager, and when he failed to do a first-class job he undertook to jump us all over into the democratic party.

I want to say that the general opinion among men everywhere is that the root of all this trouble originated under the hat of C. A. Sorenson. We all know that he was very much dissatisfied with the outcome at the conference held in Lincoln last October. He thought the Grand Island convention in December his plans were absolutely ignored and condemned.

Sorenson is a progressive to be considered in the tadpole stage, but when fully developed he is anything to destroy what will not dance to his tune. He has chosen to use Edmisten to help destroy Wray for governor, and, people say, to use Wray for senator, to make it more easy to elect Howell. This was evidently intended to eliminate Bigelow as a candidate for United States senator.

Sorenson and his henchmen have indicated that Bigelow is a joke as a candidate for that position, because he is not well enough known over the state to have any chance of election. This I think has been demonstrated in the recent manipulation by the chief mogul, Sorenson, in the fact that he has chosen Bigelow as head and shoulders, in integrity and ability, above any man yet mentioned to represent the people of Nebraska in the United States senate.
