

Police Obtain Description of Murder Suspect

Girl Who Visited Oil Station 10 Minutes Before Robbery Tells of Suspicious Character.

Police believe they now have the first real identification of the man they want in connection with the fatal holdup of the Nicholas Oil station, thirty-eighth avenue and Farnam street, last Saturday night, which ended with the death of Charles Siefken and serious wounding of his son, Robert Siefken, 16.

It was given to them by Sylvia Kulakowsky, employe of the Union Pacific, who lives near Benson.

Waited at Car.

The girl said she came downtown Saturday night with her sister and while waiting for a West Farnam street car at Fifteenth and Farnam streets, saw a man eyeing her critically.

She wears a large diamond solitaire ring, and said she was carrying her gloves in her hand.

She suspected this fellow, she said, and let one car go by just to test him out. He also passed up this car.

She boarded the next car. So did he.

She dismounted near the oil station. So did he.

Entered Oil Station.

She entered the oil station to get rid of him, she said, and while she talked with young Siefken, the man dropped out of sight, into the bushes, she believes. This was only 10 minutes before the time of the shooting, she says.

A few moments later she left the oil station and went home.

Tuesday afternoon, Siefken, who rallied somewhat from his critical condition, told an interne at the hospital of the girl stopping in his oil station, and said he believed the man who was following her was the same man who shot him.

Police Have Description.

Police have an accurate description of this man, from the lips of the girl who took special pains to note the details of his appearance.

The only part of this description which the officers will release at this time follows.

He is about 5 feet 7 inches tall. He wears dark clothes. His face was very thin. He wore a plaid cap. Detectives are looking for this man.
