Problems That Perplex

Ten per cent of the letters which come to me each day are from those who are longing for companionship—for someone who will understand.

Every one yearns for someone to whom he can talk freely and frankly, someone to whom he can confide his hopes and fears, someone who will feel that his interests are all important. And not having that "some one" is loneliness.

Unconsciously often this feeling impels to the making of chance acquaintances, to the idealizing of some one whose looks attract and who suggests an approach to the longed-for ideal.

We all want to be happy. Moreover, we all want to be happy here and now. Most of us hate to go to dinner or to the movies alone—partly because "happiness is a twin" and things enjoyed in company are twice as delightful—partly because we are miserably self-conscious over the way it looks to be seen alone all the time.

The fear of looking queer and unpopular is partly responsible for the thing we call loneliness. It drives folks who don't meet the right companions to put up with almost any one rather than be seen over and over without companionship.

Being alone seems a tragedy to most of us. But, as a matter of fact, being alone offers some of life's richest opportunities.

Most good work is done in solitude. All of us must get alone now and then for study and contemplation if we want to grow.

Loneliness, if too long enforced, means a solitude of spirit which is not easy to bear. But it offers the opportunity to get the big things done which each of us yearns to accomplish. The leisure and quiet required for growth and thought and progress are not always welcome, but they are always constructive factors in our lives.

It isn't easy for youth to be alone on long Sundays or through quiet evenings when it seems as if all the rest of the world were arranged in happy groups of two. But it is a good thing to remember that at least half the world is invisible because it also is sitting in its hall bedroom grieving over the loneliness it doesn't realize it is sharing in common with so many others.

How about using some of those lonely evenings in classes at one of the universities, or at night school or at the "Y"? What of art school or gymnasium or a course in good reading or sewing, or taking an efficiency course and preparing yourself for the position two rungs of the ladder higher than your own?

Maybe you're not an interesting or well-read person. Maybe your loneliness is due to some fault of education or training which you can study into and overcome. Use your loneliness instead of grieving over it. Perhaps the long hours which are so hard for you to bear offer you a real opportunity to make yourself a charming, lovable person who will soon win the friendship for which you yearn.

Whenever you find yourself with lonely hours on your hands, don't spend them in pitying yourself and weeping because you have not a "nice young man" or a "best girl." But instead make your lonely hours work for you and turn you into the sort of person someone else will be proud to have as a "best girl" or a "nice young man" some day.

My Marriage Problems

The Meaning Lillian Read Into Dicky's Telegram.

"Morning" Miss Graham. Look! Here's a telegram for you. Yes, ma'am. Funny thing, I was down to the Harbor this mornin' early because of Lady, she's sick, and I went over to see old Doc Denton, yes, ma'am. And just as I was comin' out of his office, the telegraph fellow over at the station was jest coming out, and he giv' me this message. Yes, ma'am! Wasn't that funny that I jest happened to be comin' out!

Jerry Ticer, shambling awkward, but with such honest good nature shining in his ruddy boyish face, one simply had to smile kindly at him, or to mark one's self a hopeless misanthrope, delivered his monologue much as if he were "rectifying a piece" in school, while I hastily scanned the contents of the yellow envelope which he handed to me.

"Yes, Jerry, that was funny," I said reluctantly, then rousing myself to the inquiry which I knew the boy expected, I asked solicitously: "Is Lady very sick?"

"Yes, ma'am, she's pretty sick. When I got up this mornin', she was all doubled up with colic, but I gave her a quart of turpentine and water, and she feels a little better. But old Doc Denton, he's got a splendid medicine for colic, so I went down to see him and get some. You ought to try it some time. Want me to leave some?"

The sight of Lillian's face with its patent struggle to smother its laughter made it exceedingly difficult for me to keep my own face straight. I hastened to dismiss Jerry.

A Mission for Jerry.

"That won't be necessary, Jerry," I said. "If I want any I can always come to you for it, and now I wish you'd go out and count all the chickens carefully. If they're all there you needn't come in again, but if any are missing, tell me at once."

"Yes, ma'am," Jerry bustled off excitedly. "You know, Miss Graham, chicken thieves might have been around after all."

His voice had a distinctly hopeful note, and I knew that Jerry's love of "something happening"—that boon so desired by lonely country-bred youth—was involuntarily triumphing over his loyal interest in our property.

"As long as that telegram is not bad news," Lillian said, as the door closed after him, "a fact I know from your unruffled face, will you enlighten me as to this mysterious Lady who is given a quart of turpentine and water, and whose colic medicine our Jerry so solicitously offers you? I trust for your sake it has nothing like turpentine in it."

Through my laughter at her puzzled expression there ran a swift little feeling of elation that my face had been enough of a "poker" one to deceive so astute an observer as Lillian. For the news in my wire, while not exactly bad, was still disturbing, and I was glad indeed that she had considered my face "unruffled."

Like Clouds Across A Summer Sky

foretelling the dreaded storm are the symptoms of women's diseases which point the way to physical and mental breakdown. The nervous irritability, the headache, the dragging pains are not only hard to endure, but they bring certain knowledge of collapse unless something is done to relieve the sufferer. There is one standard remedy which has shown the way out for nearly fifty years. The women who have "come back" through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound present an argument stronger than words could ever be.

Common Sense

Are You A Good Citizen?

You may class yourself as a good citizen merely because you pay your debts, stay at home nights, look after your family and let others alone.

But if you are a really good citizen you must do more than that. You have civic duties to perform, civic requirements to meet.

Giving assistance to those who need help is a part of your duty. You may feel that there are plenty of men more able to go ahead and do things in your community, but that does not absolve you from your duty.

These same persons may do for the poor, the community, the city and the surrounding country as if they enjoyed it—and no doubt they do get pleasure out of it—but there is your duty which none can do but you.

Your life touches others whether you will or not, and you cannot get away from this responsibility, though you may shrink it.

To be sure, your home and family come first, but certainly you know that you must do some things for your city and for those outside your immediate family circle.

You may grumble because "the same old gang" is back of every improvement or important undertaking in your city, but—

Suppose all the men in your home place were as self-centered as you are, what would your city or your community amount to?

A Silly Song

By A CUCKOO BIRD

Our sires and our grandpas they lived a hundred years and of old age departed from this here vale of years. They never had their persons opened up when they were ill, but went with all their inwards to the bone yard on the hill. Their tonsils and their adenoids stayed with them till they died, and they segued to run quite smoothly with all their works inside. But nowadays the doctors remove us bit by bit, until we get so shy of works we simply have to quit. We pass our checks at 40, or maybe 35, and spend in convalescing what time we are alive. Constipation Can Be Blamed For Diabetes and Bright's Disease!

And constipation is responsible for most cases of rheumatism, hardening of the arteries, brain fog, sluggishness, headaches and many other organic disturbances! Constipation hastens old age; in fact, authorities tell you THAT 90% OF ALL HUMAN ILLNESS IS DIRECTLY TRACEABLE TO CONSTIPATION!

With knowledge like that, can you stand by and see yourself slipping physically; see your loved ones fall, as the prey of a preventable condition? Do not minimize the dangers of constipation because you are only "slightly" troubled.

Inactivity of the eliminative passage creates toxic conditions which penetrate the intestinal walls, poisoning the blood and affecting the organs.

BRAN—Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumpled—is nature's own positive and permanent relief from constipation. It is the most wonderful corrective food known. Bran is not a "remedy," but a "roughage" that through its mineral salts and ability to absorb water—giving bulk and moisture—assists in perfect elimination. We guarantee that if Kellogg's Bran is eaten regularly—at least two tablespoonfuls daily; in chronic cases with every meal—that the sufferer will be relieved permanently! Bran is wonderful for children, for the aged, for every one!

Kellogg's Bran is delicious; its nut-like flavor greatly adding to the enjoyment of eating cereals over which it has been sprinkled. Kellogg's Bran makes the tastiest of bakery batches, such as gems, raising bread, muffins, macarons, etc. All grocers sell Kellogg's Bran.

It destroys the germs which cause most of the trouble and has a healing, soothing effect. You will be amazed to see how quickly the feeling of relief comes. Laxatives should be used wherever an effective antiseptic is needed. As a mouth wash it keeps gums and teeth clean and healthy and helps to prevent pyorrhea. Sold by leading druggists.

Parents' Problems

Is it possible to develop a love of outdoor life in city children? It is not only possible but easy. In every city there is at least one park; near every city there is the country. Make Saturday afternoon "country time" in your family; go to whatever bit of country is available, taking all the children.
