

Tariff Framing May Take Year if Attacks Continue

Only Two Schedules Disposed of in Five Weeks—13 More Still to Be Considered.

Washington, May 27.—When will the senate dispose of the tariff bill? This is an almost universal question at the capitol and one that is being asked throughout the country. Guesses—and admittedly they are no more than that—run as high as five months. It seems fairly certain that a final vote will not be reached under two months more.

Usually it takes from two to three months to put a tariff measure through the senate. The present bill has been under consideration for five weeks, but as yet less than two schedules have been disposed of and most of the big fights, such as those on sugar, hides, wool, steel and lumber, are yet to come. At this rate, taking into account that there are 15 schedules exclusive of a score of administrative provisions in the bill, the time necessary for passage would exceed one year.

Underwood Gives View. Senator Underwood of Alabama, the democratic leader, has publicly informed the majority that he has little difference as to the ultimate date on which the bill is voted on.

"With a bill of this magnitude in which a great deal is involved," said Senator Underwood, "it is our right and privilege to present our viewpoint to the country. We are going to let the American people know what is in this bill first and when that is done, then if you have a majority of votes to pass this bill you can do so."

This bill probably has more amendments than any ever before presented to the senate. Each of the 2,087 changes made in the house measure by the finance committee must be passed on and after that is done the measure will be thrown open to general amendments. Big fights will follow then, as the democrats have announced their intention of undertaking to have a number of them returned to the free list.

Has Modified Some. Thus far, the finance committee has not been overturned on a single amendment but in the face of opposition from the republican side, it has modified several of its original propositions. This policy probably will be pursued to a greater or less degree so as to reduce the number of open fights within the majority ranks.

While there has been no general assault on the measure from the republican side, certain items have been attacked and it has been indicated that such attacks will continue.

Now and then, during the next two months, the senate is to get a rest from the tariff bill, which will be laid aside temporarily for the consideration of appropriation bills and important conference reports as they are made ready for senate action.

Haynes Explains Method. Cutting off of illegal liquor at the source, rather than the running down of the elusive bootlegger, was defined today at prohibition headquarters as the broad policy of dry law enforcement being followed by Prohibition Commissioner Haynes.

Prohibition enforcement by cutting down the ranks of rum sellers, it was said, is an empty, endless task, for as quickly as one is caught, another takes his place, while by shutting off the supply, the bootlegger can be forced out of business.

Withdrawals of liquor from bonded warehouses was the first problem attacked under this policy, officials said, and with the perfection of methods to prevent the counterfeiting of withdrawal permits by the use of special paper and writing machines, and the installation of a system of checks on regular permits, the leakage of liquor from the storehouses has been reduced to a minimum.

Physicians and druggists now are being surrounded with safeguards to prevent medical liquor finding its way into illegal channels, which leaves illicit distilling and smuggling to be reckoned with as the major problems of enforcement.

New Paris Dance Club Is Popular With Americans
Paris, May 27.—Maurice and Leonora Hughes are again the sensation of Paris and in their new and sumptuous Caumartin club are setting the pace for what promises to be one of the best seasons Paris has known socially for years.

As usual Maurice and Leonora have succeeded in attracting the "cream of the crowd." Either a title or a million seems to be the watchword among the tables that hedge the dancing floor.

Homes of Comfort

In planning the four-room home, only the strictest economy is permissible. The size must be kept at a minimum, and every inch of space utilized to give the necessary convenience and comfort. Each of the two designs shown here provides a convenient grade entrance, cellar stairs, a cool place for the refrigerator, cabinets, work bench, sink and range in the kitchen, a fine bath room, nice closets and well proportioned rooms.

Design 1000-B offers regular dining room. Having one large bedroom, a bed-davenport in the living room, a bed-recliner for emergencies.

Business Prospects Bright, View of Pioneer Omaha
Business prospects are better now than at any time in the last two years, in the opinion of E. G. Gagestad, pioneer Omaha business broker, who has this view not only on his own business, but also upon the demands from persons who want to buy businesses of every kind.

"When a shoe clerk, grocery salesman, retail farmer or any other invests all his money in a new business venture," said Mr. Gagestad, "it is an unflinching barometer of better times ahead. Our inquiries have tripled in the last three months and the amount of cash available when necessary is unusual."

The E. G. Gagestad & Sons company recently has added a real estate department, specializing in homes. J. W. Connealy, W. M. Graves and E. W. Winterton have joined their force of salesmen.
