(Copyright 1922) How Lillian Gave Madge a Timely

Tip.
I stared at Lillian a bit resentfully as she voiced her jubilation over the "luck" of Dicky's trip being so timely in view of Allen Drake's forthoming arrival to consider the probm presented by the man Smith.

She was uncanny, almost inhuman, I told myself, in her subordination of every interest to her work. Sh must know that the presence of Allan Drake as a guest in my house, even though he would be there strictly on professional business, would be a source of distinct embarrassment to me, yet she had given no hint of the knowledge, beyond her joyous assertion that her lucky star had inter-vened to keep Dicky and Allen

She clapped her hand on my shoulder as she passed me with a pile of Dicky'e shirts on one arm.

"Honestly, there is a little flesh and blood left in me," she laughed banteringly. "I'm not wholly a machine, if I do appear like one to you. But this thing is so tremendous, so vital, that I can't let anybody's prejudices, or husband, stand in the way of getting to the hottom of it as soon as possible. And Allen Drake is the one ingredient needed for the pudding just now. Don't you worry Leave the Dicky-bird to me. I'll atnd to him. If you like, I'll give you written guarantee that he'll not utter a single peevish chirp upon the subject of Allen Drake. Want one?" Her face was so laughter-provokng in its gamin-like impishness that

I felt my rancor mely away. "No. I think I'll struggle along on your word of honor," I said laugh-"But you might at least tell me when you expect Allen Drake. You know Mother Graham will want to clean house before Dad and he

That's just the reason why I'm not going to tell you," she retorted. They're going to drop down on us with but an hour's warning if I can manage it. Then your mother-in-law won't have any time to stage her well-known stunt of turning the house upside down, and as you will be in complete ignorance of the hour of arrival, the can't possibly blame

"Perhaps she can't, but she will," I murmered.

No. for I shall lay my devoted head upon her chopping block before she has time to catch you. But I'll give you one tip if your housewifely soul desires it. I'm just honing for one of Katie's broiled guinea hen dinners about tomorrow night. Tell me, which of these shrits the Dickybird will want?"

I knew that there would be no use in asking another question, so I returned to the important matter of deciding which of my husband's sar-torial possessions should be packed the trunk for which he had asked. With Lillian's invaluable aid, and frequent reference to Dicky's volumin ous telegram, the trunk was finally ked, locked and strapped, and Jer-Ticer summoned to convey it to the station and express it to Dicky's

Not until then did I give myself time to plan for the coming of my father, and his brilliant companion, whom I had found at once fascinating and antagonistic at the rare intervals when I had seen him.

thanked my housewifely stare that gone to setting. the day of trunk packing was that of the girl's weekly cleaning. Unobtrusively I followed her about, giving awful bad today, but as he was too the finishing touches to my father's busy to go to the barbershop he sent room and the guest room, which I expected to assign to Allen Drake. did not dare to put flowers in either room, for fear of my motherthat all my vases and baskets below cept Atlas. stairs were filled with the late autumn blossoms, a custom of mine which occasions no comment. And counted upon Lillian's promise of an hour's warning to make attractive with welcoming blossoms the rooms of the travelers.

My crowning achievement Machiavellianism, however, was in regard to the dinner. The morning of the next day I sat down in Mother Graham's room with a little exas-

"Oh, Mother, do tell me something new and good to have for dinner! I'm hungry, and we seem to have same things over and over." She rose to the bait at once.

That's because you let that ape of a Katie do so much of the planning of the meals." she said. "Now. me see, what haven't we had? how!" she said triumphantly. Those young guinea hens in the barnyard ought to be just about right. fancy some of those broiled and then to go with them we ought-

She outlined a delicious and elaborate dinner, to which I assented, and reported to Lillian enthusiastically. 'The darling old gourmet!" she responded. "Now, mind you, I'm not saying anybody but ourselves is going to eat that dinner. You'll have your alibi when I spring the news on

A Silly Song -By A CUCKOO BIRD -

A man with a job, and his heart in Lis task, is the very best asset a nation can ask. For he never climbs upon a box in the street, and lambasts his country with fervor and heat. He has no time, whatever, to listen to cranks who want to divide all the cash in the banks. He never slips out of an alley at night and brains, with a blackjack, some unlucky wight. He doesn't set fire to the plant his boss, and chuckle in glee at the millions of loss. As long as he's busy, he never gets blue and he don't care if others are prospering, too. The very best bulwark a nation can ask, is the man with a job and his heart in his task.

Parents' Problems

How can a child's jealousy of the new baby be overcome? By making it plain to the child that the new baby is partly hers. From the very beginning, the baby should be spoken of as "ours." If she realizes that the little brother is not something new and dear of father's and mother's, but of their's and her's, she will feel no further jealousy.
