

Vast Crowd Fills Ak's Den to See 'King Arthur's Goats'

Another Great Success Added to Long Line of Productions—Latenser Is Dashing King—Buckingham and Congressman Jefferis Meet With Accident.

Gus Renze, artificer and impresario of Ak-Sar-Ben, has added another great success to his long line of productions. The vast crowd of men that filled the historic "den" Monday night acclaimed this fact with loud cheers, applause and mirth.

It was the opening night of the season and, as "Buck" Buckingham said in a few well-chosen words after the premier presentation of the new show, "King Arthur's Goats," this was by far the biggest crowd ever in the den on an opening night.

The membership arrived at the 3,566 mark, 330 more than last year on opening night.

"These are professional actors, aren't they?" one of the delegates to the B'nai B'rith convention here inquired of the men who sat beside him. That inquiry gives an idea of the quality.

Of course, it's all secret stuff unless you're a knight of Ak-Sar-Ben (price $10 and the biggest money's worth on earth.) But we can stretch our oaths far enough to say that the play concerns the court of King Arthur of old and his round table, with the Sheik of Araby, 1922 model, thrown in for good measure and to make it interesting.

Rehearsed Thoroughly.

Oscar Lieben, the tireless and wonderful little musical director, had rehearsed his actors and actresses so thoroughly that there wasn't a single hitch in the whole three acts, and Dan Butler, prompter, just had to sit there and do nothing.

The oath of secrecy also doesn't prevent us from remarking that Frank Latenser is a handsome and dashing king; E. H. Strickler, a lovely Guinevere; Maynard Schwartz, a Valentino sheik; Dr. Gladstone Derby, a knightly Lancelot. The other principals included George Long, Marcus Nielsen, C. R. Tyler, Rollin Thomas, Christian Larsen, Charles Docherty, Kenneth Reed, A. L. Frederick, Mickey Gibson, and they're all fine.

Walter Adams, female impersonator, who has been out of the show for three years because of an accident, staged a great comeback, putting on a dance of subtlety fascination.

And the chorus. Oooo, la la! The Arabian "maids" that waltz in with the sheik are so beautiful that the crowd just bustled in with applause right in the midst of the chorus as a sort of tribute to beautiful "womanhood."

It's a knockout, men, on the level. And if you get a chance to buy a membership at $10, do it. You can see the show 14 times for that and get all the hot dogs, cheese sandwiches, buttermilk and coffee you can eat at each and every performance, about $12 worth of eats for $10. Dr. Waggener's beloved saxophone octet was back on the job and was greeted with great applause and performed with its old-time vim and rhythm.

serve bank was grand multi last night. Next Monday the grand multi will be some other business man. This year there will be a new grand multi every Monday night.

Henry Dunn, police commissioner; William Wappich, police judge, and Harry Stevens superintended the numerous laughter-producing imitation stunts in which, too, the fertile brain of Gus has surpassed itself.

And when the curtain had fallen on the beautiful scenery of the third act and rose again, behold a Ford truck drove in upon the stage. Seated upon it were the rotund and robust forms of E. Buckingham and Congressman A. W. Jefferis.

But—heavens! Is the chauffeur mad? Oh, a crash!

The automobile, with its heavy and important human freight, has run right into a stone wall. The stones have tumbled upon the two passengers who, it seems, were cunningly seated where all the mortar and lime would fall on their clothes.

Both Escape Injury.

But they are unhurt, though they certainly look like a couple of plasterers. They are introduced then as the speakers of the evening. "Buck" told how great Ak-Sar-Ben is and is going to be.

Big Jeff was in an almost continual white smoke screen as he eulogized Nebraska and particularly the people of Omaha and the Second congressional district. Sigmund Livingston of Bloomington, Ill., a B'nai B'rith delegate also spoke.

Most of the Ak-Sar-Ben governors witnessed the opening show. All the music and songs were broadcast by radio.

Buck Mercantile Company Again Looted by Burglars

Burglars removed a panel from the rear door of the W. S. Buck Mercantile company, 1708 Dodge street, sometime Saturday or Sunday night, backed up a wagon to the door and stole a quantity of rugs, blankets and the like to an undetermined value, according to a police report filed this morning.

Manager S. L. Hemstreet said an inventory is being taken to determine the extent of the loot.

A few weeks ago this firm suffered from a $10,700 fire, and several months ago, when the company was located at 2370 Leavenworth street, it was raided by burglars for several thousand dollars' worth of loot.

Racial and Religious Prejudice Decried in Address by Sigmund Livingston.

Decrying racial and religious prejudice, Sigmund Livingston of Bloomington, Ill., gave the principal address at the B'nai B'rith banquet, last night in the Brandeis restaurant. Nearly 1,000 attended the dinner-dance, chief social function of the annual convention, closing today.

A feature of the event was the presentation of a gold watch to Henry Minsky of Omaha, retiring president. Harry Lapidus presented the tribute. Gustave Loevinger of St. Paul, Minn., new president, spoke and Rev. Herbert J. Samuels of Winnipeg, Canada, gave the invocation. W. L.

Hokman was toastmaster and Harry Malashock in charge of arrangements. Preceding the B'nai B'rith ritual memorial service for departed members, held yesterday afternoon in the Blackstone ballroom with Rabbi Frederick Cohn as speaker, Benjamin Samuels of Chicago was named trustee for the Cleveland Orphan home, supported by the B'nai B'rith order. Trustees will also be named for the Denver Consumptive home and the Leo N. Levi hospital in Hot Spings, Ariz. A class of 100 new members was also initiated. Closing business sessions will be held today at the Blackstone. Visiting women will be entertained at a bridge-luncheon in the Brandeis Renaissance room.

Osceola Decorates Graves of 64 Who Served in Wars

Osceola, Neb., May 30.—(Special Telegram.)—Decoration day ceremonies in Osceola were attended by the usual number this afternoon, and consisted of a program of speaking and music in the auditorium and the placing of flowers on the graves of all departed soldiers in the Osceola cemetery.

The address of the day was delivered by A. W. Thompson of York. In the Osceola cemetery there are graves of 64 soldiers of the civil and recent wars. A light rain has fallen during part of the day, but not enough to interfere with carrying out the program as planned.

Canadian Flyer Joins Amundsen Expedition

Seattle, May 30.—Lieut. G. L. Fullerton, well-known Canadian flyer, arrived from Ottawa yesterday to join the Amundsen expedition, which leaves for the north Saturday. Lieut. Fullerton has had extensive experience in flying in northern climates and will act as air scout for the party, going on ahead to map out the course of the exploration ship Maud, and make meteorological observation.
