WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY.
Violet Ingleby, a pretty but poorly dressed English girl, who had been in London street in the rain when her shabby little hat is blown off and she is rescued by a well-dressed and handsome young man. The latter picks up the hat and she is so grateful to him that she goes on to tell him the story of her life. He is so sympathetic and kind that she tells him the story of her life. He is so sympathetic and kind that she tells him the story of her life.

Olive Hale was in Galtwick's Drapery store. She spent her time in the show-room trying on costumes for people who liked things cheap and fashionable. Her tall, slim figure showed off coats and mantles to advantage. She loved prouetting before long mirrors and taking graceful steps to and fro for the benefit of some likely purchaser.

She lodged in a room above Violet's. It was a better furnished room, but smaller, and was always littered with dresses and scraps of finery, and bottles of scent and samples of boxes of powder.

The show-walker at Galtwick's had taken her out on two occasions. Mr. Green, of the ribbon department, sometimes presented her with flowers, not to mention the young man at the china shop opposite who had dared to write her several love letters.

She loved admiration, but she had no intention of getting married until she found a man with money and she said so quite frankly. She was well paid at Galtwick's, but she spent all her money on finery, which was why she lived at Mrs. Higgs'.

She and Violet Ingleby had met on the stairs at No. 13. Olive had reluctantly considered Violet pretty—Violet had admired Olive's figure and the clothes she wore. The casual acquaintance had ripened into an odd sort of friendship, prompted by loneliness on Violet's part and desire for admiration on Olive's.

In her way she was kind to Violet. She got her into the show-room at Galtwick's, although she knew that the younger girl would not be able to stand the life. She had been kind to her since, though that she was particularly interested in her was obvious by the casual way she questioned her concerning the child. It was of no consequence to her what Violet did, so long as she was ready and willing to admire when it was expected of her.

She forgot all about the child before the door of Violet's room was closed behind her.

She did not remember him again until the following morning, when Violet came shyly into the show-room at Galtwick's.

Olive was prouetting before a long glass. It was still early, and there was not much business to do. She went forward to meet Violet, conscious that she was looking her best in her black silk shop gown.

She smiled down at the younger girl's shy face.

"My dear child, what on earth do you want?"

Violet explained hesitatingly. She had got some money; she wanted some new clothes; she was going to call at Violet's and ask to be taken on.

She showed Olive a couple of sovereigns. Olive smiled and said: "Oh, well, you won't be able to get very much for that," she said disdainfully. "But I'll do what I can."

Finally she fitted Violet with a coat and skirt at 30 shillings and sent her down to a bosom friend of hers in the millinery to purchase an 8s 6d hat. Violet hardly knew herself when, arrayed in her new finery, she left the shop and walked quickly down the road.

It was a bright sunny morning; the rough wind had dropped; there were crocuses and daffodils in the window boxes of some of the big houses she passed. She had left the child with Mrs. Higgs—she had almost been afraid to bring him out with her—she wondered if she had done very wrong in taking him away last night, if any one would wish to claim him, if she would be suspected or traced.

She had raised some money on a ring. She had still a few shillings left of which she had not told Olive—with them she meant to buy some clothes for the child.

PIMPLES ON FACE AND NECK

Itched and Burned. Lost Rest. Cuticura Heals.

"Pimples broke out on my face and neck. They were hard, large and red, and itched and burned, causing me to scratch and irritate the affected parts. My face was disfigured for the time being, and I lost my rest at night because of the irritation. The trouble lasted about a year. I sent for a few samples of Cuticura Soap and Ointment which helped me so I purchased more and was healed, after using three cakes of Soap, together with the Ointment." (Signed) Miss Minnie Zimmerman, 609 Holloway St., Akron, Ohio, Sept. 13, 1921.

Use Cuticura for all toilet purposes. Sample Book Free by Mail. Address: "Cuticura Laboratories, Dept. B, Hudson St., New York, N. Y." Sold every-where. Cuticura Soap shaves without use.

Pop Stand Owner Fined $100 for Having Whisky in Place

A police raiding squad paid a visit Thursday afternoon to the pop stand and cafe operated by Enno Harms, 201 South Ninth street.

A package lay on the safe. Opening it, the officers found two half-pints of corn whisky and a book in which was written the name of "Robert."

"Oh, Robert," called the head of the squad. Up stepped a youth about 22 years old, in answer to the call, who said he was Robert George, assistant to Harms. He claimed the book, but Harms was arrested.

"A stranger brought that package in," Harms said in central police court yesterday morning, "and asked if he might leave it for a little while." Harms was fined $100 for illegal possession of liquor, but gave notice of an appeal.

Four Suspects Sentenced to Jail on Vagrancy Charge

Harry and Roy Compton, Ray and Axel Pearson and Lawrence Kinney, arrested Thursday for investigation in connection with the thwarted burglary of the Park avenue pharmacy, Thirtieth and Farnam streets, were sentenced to 90 days in jail each on charges of vagrancy by Judge Foster in central police court yesterday morning. Harry Compton was nabbed at Twenty-sixth and Harney streets after three men had been surprised in an attempt to pry the lock off a side door of the apothecary shop. The other four were arrested later near a billboard by the drug store behind which a revolver had been found. To Hold Court at Tekamah District Judge Goas will go to Tekamah soon to preside at the trial of the three men captured after they robbed the bank at Decatur two weeks ago.
