

Grain Men Voice Opposition to Futures Measure

Former President of Chicago Board of Trade Picks Flaws in Revised Capper-Tincher Bill.

Washington, June 9.—(Special Telegram.)—Opposition of the grain exchanges of the country to the revised Capper-Tincher bill for the regulation of future trading in grain was voiced before the house committee on agriculture by T. F. Gates, former president of the Chicago Board of Trade.

Mr. Gates insisted that the new bill, which seeks to control grain exchanges under the commerce clause of the constitution, would enable a secretary of agriculture to build up a political machine through his control of the weighing and licensing of grain.

Encroaches on State.

The Chicago grain man also pointed out the bill encroached upon some of the functions of the state governments in assuming to control the weighing of grain. He said that there had been a tendency of late for bureaucrats in the federal government to take over the state powers which rightfully belonged to the latter.

So far as the sections relating to manipulation were concerned, Mr. Gates said that no new legislation was needed. "If there are attempts to corner the grain markets now, the manipulators can be reached through the anti-trust laws now on the statute books." He added that attempts to corner the markets were very infrequent.

Under the terms of the Capper-Tincher bill grain exchanges would have to apply to the secretary of agriculture for rights to operate a contract market. This was opposed by Mr. Gates as tending to place too much power in the hands of executive officers.

Oppose Report Plan.

Still another section of the act, which provides that governing boards of grain exchanges send reports of all business done by their members to the secretary, was opposed on the ground that 10 competitors were members of the board. It would not be fair to permit competitors to know one another's business, he pointed out. An amendment was suggested to that section to the effect that members themselves send in individual reports.

Tomorrow, Frederick B. Wells, former president of the Minneapolis Chamber of Commerce, will follow Mr. Gates in outlining the objections of the grain exchanges.

Leaders of the "farm bloc" in the house are anxious to pass the Capper-Tincher bill before the house begins its recess vacation. There is little chance that the bill can be acted upon in the senate however.

RADIO Radio Is Hobby to Young and Old

New Art Stimulates Inventive Genius in Young America—Game Is Refreshing.

By JOHN E. KENNEBECK.

(This is the fifth installment of The Bee's story of radio.)

Radio is more than recreation; it is a malady to which millions are susceptible throughout the world.

"Radioitis" has more than 1,000,000 victims in this country. Young and old are in the game. In the early days of radio, no governmental restrictions were placed upon work of any kind. No limit was put on the wave-lengths of transmitters and the power of outfits. Many amateurs took keen delight in filling the ether with all kinds of jargon by the dot and dash code. The ether was one grand bedlam as practically every receiving set had a spark set also.

This soon became a nuisance. The government in 1912 made an effort to quell amateurs who filled the air with interferences, and a law was passed which is still in force. It laid down reasonable conditions regarding the rights of the amateur. It provided that a power of more than one kilowatt should not be used in amateur sending stations. The law further required that it should be necessary to have an operator's license if a station should be capable of transmitting over the boundary lines of the state in which it is located.

Under the radio communication laws of the United States, the country is divided into nine districts. Headquarters are as follows:

- First district ..... Boston
- Second district ..... New York
- Third district ..... Baltimore
- Fourth district ..... Norfolk
- Fifth district ..... New Orleans
- Sixth district ..... San Francisco
- Seventh district ..... Seattle
- Eighth district ..... Detroit
- Ninth district ..... Chicago

No restrictions are placed upon receiving stations as they are unable to interfere with one another. Radio is a creative hobby.

It appeals strongly to that inventive instinct which every normal individual has. It offers an unlimited opportunity to exercise the creative faculty. Every amateur has his own way to "hook-up" a receiving set and any hobby that allows this wide range of experimentation is alluring. The relaxation that radio offers is refreshing. It will add years to the life of any man.

Wireless amateurs are a clannish lot. They love to get together and talk shop. As a result, local radio clubs are coming into vogue. A club room is found, and here the meetings are held at various times. Lectures are arranged, code practicing stations are formed and sooner or later the club has its own station.

As a hobby, radio even has possibilities of being a means of playing chess or checkers by long distance—a novel pastime.

Whether this sport is a fad or not, it presages to become one of the biggest commercial businesses in the future.

The sixth installment of The Bee's story of radio tomorrow will treat of wireless as a sport for the traveler.

Sparks

The new station established at the Presidio army post opened transcontinental communication with the Governor's Island (N. Y.) station this week. Immediate and direct communication with other continental army posts and Honolulu has been planned.

High-powered receiving stations in Omaha should tune in on this transcontinental communication every night.

Look out for the summer-time radioimps.

The bureau of standards of the Department of Commerce served notice today upon radio fans not to be surprised this summer if the radio receiving set "gives forth a first-class imitation of a boiler shop in full operation instead of an anticipated lecture on the culture of silk worms." For the "bad radio weather" season has opened.

When in Omaha Stop at Hotel Rome

According to the bureau, summer disturbances, called "strays," "static," "atmospherics" and other names, are in evidence until about October 1. The extent to which they are serious varies from weak interferences for brief intervals to a continuous succession of boiler shop noises which may last throughout the night.

Little Girl Injured in Playing Expires

Christine Barone, 6, little daughter of Christ Barone, car repairer, 3033 Valley street, died Friday after having been taken suddenly ill while on her way to school Thursday morning. According to some of her playmates, she had been pushed into a ditch the evening before while playing, but her father states that she said she was feeling better Thursday morning and dressed to go to school.

After proceeding a few blocks she felt sick and her sister, Alma, 13, who came along immediately after found her and took her back to the house. A doctor who attended the girl said nothing could be done. It is thought that either the injury of the preceding evening or sunstroke may be responsible for her death.

Funeral services will be held at 11 this morning.

Postal Instructions May Be Taught in Public Schools

Postal instructions are to be taught in the public schools if a resolution adopted by the National Postmasters' association is carried out. A committee of members has outlined a brief course of study.
