

IN SOCIETY.

Admirably suited for a brilliant June wedding was Wednesday. The day was cool and all the conditions were propitious. The wedding of Mr. John T. Dorgan and Miss Jeanette Wilson had been looked forward to with much interest on account of the prominence of the contracting parties. Mr. Dorgan has for some years held an important place in society and is one of the most prosperous young business men in the city. Miss Wilson is a highly accomplished and attractive young lady, whose family connections are among the most respected people in Lincoln. The young people have been actively identified with society and their popularity was attested by the large attendance. The ceremony was performed in the Church of the Holy Trinity, and was particularly effective. As the strains of the wedding march sounded Lieut. Pershing made his appearance at the head of the bridal procession, entering the church from the west door. Then came the bridal party in the following order: Mr. Otto Mohrenstecher, Mr. George J. Woods, Mr. Herbert Marsland, of Belmont, Cal., Mr. W. D. Robinson, Miss Grace Oakley, and Miss Lucy Griffith, Miss Marie Hoover and Miss Rose Carson, Mr. Sam E. Low and Mr. R. M. Joyce, Mr. Mattson Baldwin and Dr. White, Miss Marie Marshall and Miss Maud Oakley, Miss Olive Letta, and Miss Mame Carson, Mr. C. P. A. Clough and Dr. C. E. Spahr, Mr. Frank C. Zebrung, Mrs. Otto Mohrenstecher and Mrs. W. D. Robinson, Mrs. Herbert Marsland and Mrs. George Woods. Following these came the maid of honor Miss Jennie McFarland, preceding the bride, who walked by the side of her grandfather, the Honorable Amasa Cobb. Miss Wilson's gown was notably beautiful. It was of heavy white duchesse satin with long train, long sleeves, cut high in the neck and elaborately trimmed with point lace. She wore a long veil and carried a large bouquet of white roses. There has been no more beautiful or striking wedding gown worn in Lincoln. The bridesmaids were charming in thin summer dresses of elaborate and varying design. Pink and white predominated. The maid of honor wore a simple white Swiss gown. Mesdames Robinson, Woods, Marsland and Mohrenstecher wore their wedding gowns. Mr. Dorgan and his best man, Mr. Amasa Wilson, of Denver, entered from the east, coming from the rector's study, and joined the bridal party at the steps to the choir in the nave, where the ceremony of betrothal was celebrated according to the beautiful custom of the Episcopal church, the rector, Rev. John Hewett, performing the ceremony. General Cobb gave the bride away. The bridesmaids and ushers were stationed on either side of the choir, the remainder of the party occupying the usual position facing the sanctuary north. The betrothal consummated Mr. Dorgan with Miss Wilson's hand in his, where it had been placed by the rector, led his bride past the ushers and bridesmaids into the sanctuary and before the altar where the veil was removed. Mr. Hewitt standing at the chancel rail pronounced them man and wife. Seldom has the marriage ceremony of the church been so impressively rendered. The procession left the church in the usual order,

Mr. and Mrs. Dorgan radiantly happy. After the ceremony there was a reception at the residence of General and Mrs. Cobb, 335 North Fourteenth street, to which the intimate friends of the bride and groom were bidden. It was a gay and fashionable assemblage, the happy couple receiving the congratulations of more than a hundred of their friends. The display of wedding gifts shown at the reception including a large collection of cut glass and silver, was much admired. Mr. and Mrs. Dorgan left for the east, intending to spend several weeks on their wedding tour. On their return they will take possession of their residence, Fourteenth and E streets. Among the out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Cass, Mr. and Mrs. D. D. Muir, of Denver; Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Dorgan and Mr. Frank Dorgan of Texas.
