

The next attraction following "A Bowery Girl" at the Lansing will be Prof. Herbert T. Flint, the hypnotist who will commence a week's engagement Sept. 2. Prof. Flint has appeared in Lincoln several times and is well remembered.

"Chimmie Fadden" is only one of a great many literary and theatrical manifestations for which "the bowery" is responsible, the most dreadful of which is, perhaps, the plays in the class with "A Bowery Girl," which was the opening attraction at Boyd's in Omaha and the Lansing theatre this week. "A Bowery Girl" opened at Boyd's Sunday night and came to Lincoln for one performance Wednesday.

"A Bowery Girl" was presented with the following cast:

- Ernest Halcombe.....H. A. Burkhardt
- A young clerk
- Nicholas Franklin.....Mark W. Cody
- An unscrupulous lawyer
- Patrick Hallian.....Geo. W. Thompson
- Ruler of the 4th ward
- Cesca Bertolina.....Edward Clifton
- An Italian padrone
- Swipesey.....John Daly
- A Bowery boy
- Augustus Hopfbrauer.....Andy Amann
- Son of a rich brewer with a liking for the society of the Bowery
- Ah You.....Ed. Coles
- A Bowery Chinaman
- Officer.....R. H. Wilson
- Nora Hallinan.....Clara Thropp
- A leader in Bowery society
- Maggie Morrison.....Emma Sardou
- On the Bowery under crust
- Alicia Bertolina.....Helen Jones
- Wife of Cesca
- Agnes DeLorme.....Mamie Ryan
- A lost heiress
- Mrs. Franklin.....Georgie Lester
- A neglected wife
- Mabel.....Little Jess
- Her child

Besides the people, there is some Bowery scenery, Bowery slang and Bowery songs. I believe it was said in the advertisements that some of the members of the company were taken from the Bowery. I am not disposed to doubt the truth of this assertion. Clara Thropp, familiar to those people who remember Neil Burgess' "County Fair," and the recent Hallen & Hart visitation, has a degree of cleverness, and her capacity extends beyond the possibilities of "A Bowery Girl." Andy Amann's efforts gave life and some interest to the performance.

The formal opening of the Lansing will be deferred until September 10, when Mr. Church's "Faust" company will give one performance. Word was received from John Griffith this week. He will arrive in Lincoln, with the remainder of the company, September 1, when rehearsals will commence.

Charles Frohman's Empire Theatre company which opened the Creighton Theatre in Omaha Thursday night, with "The Masqueraders," will present "Liberty Hall" at the matinee this afternoon, and tonight the bill will be "Sowing the Wind."

"The Masqueraders" was presented to a brilliant audience at the opening of the Creighton Theatre Thursday evening. The vivid scene at the opening of the Boyd several years ago, when "Alabama" was given, was recalled. In the Empire Theatre company are Henry Miller, William Feversham, J. E. Dodson, Robert Edeson, W. H. Crompton, Joseph Humphreys, E. Y. Backus, J. E. Finney, Viola Allen, Ida Conquest, May Robson, Genevieve Reynolds and Ellen Gail. Seldom is a more notable company than this seen so far away from New York as Omaha. The play is by Henry Arthur Jones, and is a powerful dramatic story. In the third act is one of the most striking and effective scenes to be found anywhere in current theatrical production. A wife and child are staked against $1,000,000. Sir Brice Skene has ruined himself on the turf and he desires his wife to borrow money from David Remon, an astronomer. In the third act she has borrowed £6,000. Skene appears and discovers his wife and Remon making the usual protestations of affection. He suggests to Remon that they play—the stake to be his, Skene's, wife and child against Dave Remon's £200,000. They play and Sir Brice loses. The play is exquisitely acted throughout.

Lottie Collins, who is in London, has made another hit with a song which promises to become another "Ta-ra-ra-boom-de-ay" for her. It is called "I Went to Paris with Papa," and possesses a jingle which seems to have made the aural tympanum of the Britons vibrate vigorously. The chorus goes: I went to Paris with papa, to see what kind the Frenchmen are.

Such funny ways they've got, which Englishmen have not. You really should to Paris go; you learn so very much, you know. I saw a lot in Paris that they never taught at school.

Her arch ways seem to have caught the English public, who have forgiven her for her temporary desertion of the land of her birth, while she played havoc with that dreadful ta-ra-ra throughout this country.

A New York writer says: James Corbett may be a very bad husband. It is exceedingly likely that he is, for he has learned how to be bad in that very excellent and thorough school—the stage. He may have been unduly intimate with the lady known as Vera. More unlikely things have been heard of in this extraordinary world. He may have neglected pretty Ollie Lake Corbett, and brought the tears of distress to her eye—the eye that wasn't turned to business. He may have grown purse-proud, overbearing, arrogant and domestically pugilistic—for such a case would be perfectly within the bounds of possibility. But in spite of all these damning suggestions, these horrible hints of an insidious mental deterioration, my heart went out to him in sympathy when I learned that Mrs. Corbett, at the divorce hearing, appeared in a neat shirt waist, with diamond solitaires in her ears, a chatelaine and watch pinned to her waist, and a belt of open-work gold. To a man of Corbett's refinement this must have been gall and wormwood. Think of having to pass your life with a woman who in the morning will sport a neat shirt waist and diamond earnings.

NOTES AND QUERIES

Beginning next week THE COURIER will publish a Notes and Queries column.

There may be a few questions concerning etiquette that the editor of this department cannot answer properly. But there are persons in this city who cannot be puzzled by any question of good form. These people have consented to aid the editor of this column when the window sticks. When people who have made a life time study of convention consent to give to others the results of it, it is worth while accepting their offer. After all convention is a protection evolved in the slow development from savagery. It is the difference between borrowing and stealing. When prehistoric man wanted anything that his neighbor had he took it if he were big enough; if not he stole it. The modern requests the loan of any desired article in language elegant enough to effect its immediate transfer. It is the purpose of THE COURIER to disseminate, increase a knowledge of the polite arts so that in these dull times articles and cash may circulate (and be returned). Thus the place will have an air of great activity, and encourage the real thing to settle here.

There are other questions concerning the traditions of the state, county and city that may take more time to answer but they will surely be answered. The state historical society is a constantly increasing source of source of supply. And there are many old residents whose memories are libraries of the infant ways and saying of the early Nebraskans. So just ask us a few questions—anyone in the audience please.
