

even when he is so unfortunate as to dwell in Lincoln.

I hear that the Revolt of the Women in the French revolution was nothing to what occurred in a certain hair dressing parlor on Fourteenth street late last Friday afternoon before the first reception of the Lincoln club. There were clamoring and anguish and despair as two dozen excited women sat about with dishevelled locks awaiting their "turn." There were groans and entreaties and prayers enough to make any ordinary hair dresser lose her head, but the one in question lost neither her presence of mind nor her old time skill, for when the two dozen women appeared at the party in the evening they were radiant and beaming and their coiffeurs were things to dream of.

Mr. Alfred J. McClatchie who graduated from the university in '88 and who is now professor of botany in the Throop Polytechnic Institute of California has published a very creditable work on the flora of Pasadena.

Wednesday morning, at the residence of Mr. W. C. Lane, Nestor A. Rummons and Miss Clara Schroeder were married by the Rev. Mr. Burch. Mr. Rummons is a young lawyer of the firm of Boehmer & Rummons and is well known in Lincoln, where he has spent his student and business life. Mr. and Mrs. Rummons are now in St. Louis on a short wedding trip.

The university botanical library is in receipt of one of the most beautiful of scientific works ever published in this country. It is a work on the Sylva of North America in eight huge volumes by Chas. Sprague Sargent. The whole work is printed upon Holland linen and the printing is the work of the Riverside Press. The plates were drawn by C. E. Faxon, probably the best scientific draughtsman in this country, who has been at work on them for almost ten years. It was impossible to have the engraving properly done in this country, so the drawings were sent to Paris and were there engraved by Teneur. The books cost $25 a volume, but they are worth it simply as a thing of beauty, and aside from their immense scientific value.

There was an interesting meeting of the Pleasant Hour club Thursday afternoon. Many persons are familiar with the report of a remark recently made by the new military instructor at the State University, Captain Guilfoyle, about a prominent member of the club, a remark that was taken as reflecting on all members of the club who are "in trade." This matter was under consideration in view of the fact that Captain Guilfoyle had been invited to attend the club reception last evening. It was announced that the captain would not be present, and thereupon a resolution was adopted unanimously resenting the insult cast upon the club and its president.

The Pleasant Hour club opened its season last evening with a reception at the Lincoln hotel to Mr. and Mrs. George J. Woods, Mr. and Mrs. John T. Dorgan and Mr. and Mrs. Lew Marshall. There was a large number of invited guests, and the party was especially brilliant.

Society was always a liberal patron of the races given in connection with the state fair, and the first meet of the Lincoln Park association, which will have its opening day Monday, will probably call out a large representation from the social world. Of course the races will be infinitely superior to anything of the kind ever seen in Lincoln, and the afternoons of next week will afford a splendid opportunity for the birds of plumage to show their fine feathers. In New York the annual horse show has come to be known as the beauty show, and the indications are that the fall and spring races in this city will be the occasion of a brilliant demonstration on the part of society. The management has provided forty-four boxes, and a large number of these have already been engaged, some of them for the entire week. Racing parties will be quite the thing next week, particularly Monday, which will be Lincoln day.

One of the old books at the rooms of the State Historical society should be very interesting to Lincoln people. It is the old register of Nebraskans at the Philadelphia centennial of 1876. Only about seventy pages out of the 400 are decorated with that artless penmanship which only a register can show. An exception should perhaps be made of the first page, which is written in one uniform hand, as if the register came late to the centennial. Among the names that appear on this first page are J. C. McBride, Mrs. D. B. Cropey, Bruno Tzschuck and wife, Amasa Cobb, Samuel Owen and wife, Lincoln; also Silas Garber, Mrs. Garber, P. W. Hitchcock, Mrs. Hitchcock, Lorenzo Crouse, and R. W. Furnas. Some who wrote their names after their papas' names and others who left that matter altogether to the fond parent, have grown to manhood or womanhood since 1876, and now have homes of their own. It is surprising how many names occur of Lincolnites whose faces may be seen daily about the streets. Such are O. A. Mullen, Isaac M. Raymond, David May, W. W. Wilson, A. C. Zeimer, S. B. Pound, Mrs. S. B. Pound, Grace Griffith, A. M. Davis, G. M. Lambertson, L. W. Billingsley, L. J. Byer, J. H. Foxworthy, J. D. McFarland, S. S. Royce, J. C. McBride, M. L. Hiltner, O. W. Webster and wife, John B. Wright, T. H. Leavitt. E. H. Andrus registered from Kearney as "Land Agent for the Great Loup Valley," and on the following page from Bloomington as "Land Agent for the Republican Valley." Brevity forbids mention of the names of those who used to be seen in Lincoln, but who have scattered to other states or to foreign parts, like V. E. Farmer, Victor Vitquain, G. E. Howard and Samuel Aughey. Many, too, whose names are written in the Centennial book as citizens of Lincoln have gone from us forever.

Will convince every conceivable man that our clothes are right in facility, style and price. We cannot boast with some of our colleagues of $560 a month rent or a $100 window dresser, but we do know that light expenses justify small profits, and furthermore that close bargain prices, together with strict business integrity, have brought to us a handsome trade that thrives and flourishes in spite of the hard times. If you want to plant your $10 in a suit or overcoat we are confident we can please you and your critical friends
