Willits Sawyer, university '94, is at Loughboro, England, about sixty miles from London. He is supervising the construction of an experimental line of surface contact street railway, and writes to his father, H. B. Sawyer, that he is mixing some genuine pleasure with his electrical work. Several other recent graduates of the department of electrical and steam engineering are holding lucrative positions as follows: G. P. Thurber, electrician, Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company, Pittsburg; James Barkley, electrician in charge of three power stations in the Union Traction company, Philadelphia; M. M. Maghee, consulting and constructing engineer, Denver,

Colo.; W. L. Stockton, electrician, Evansville Electric R. R., Evansville, Ind.; E. H. Houghton, state electrical insurance inspector; J. W. McCrosky, electrician, La Capital Tramway company, Buenos Ayres, Arg.

L. S. Geisthardt has returned from St. Paul and Minneapolis.

Mrs. J. W. Johnson and Miss Morrell Stevenson have returned from Kansas City.

The vestry and members of the Church of Holy Trinity will give a reception to the rector, Rev. H. Percy Silver, in the chapel of the church, J and Twelfth streets, on Tuesday evening, May 26, from 8 to 10 p. m.

Mr. and Mrs. Kelley of Cincinnati are visiting their son, W. F. Kelley. They will remain in the city several days.

J. H. MacColl of Lexington, candidate for governor, was in the city this week.

Mr. Stull has gone east to see his friends.

Through the kindness of Superintendent Jones the orchestra and chorus connected with the Nebraska institute for the blind at Nebraska City gave two concerts yesterday at the state hospital for the insane in this city.

The department of elocution and oratory at the state university gave a delightful program in the chapel Thursday evening, May 12. In spite of the threatening weather a well filled house greeted the performers. Townspeople as well as students are prompt in accepting an invitation to one of Mrs. Manning's dramatic recitals. The first number on the program was a piano solo, "The Spinning Wheel," by Shultz. The rendering of this by Miss Galley was particularly light and dainty.

Little Sarah Muir made a charming old lady in her rustling black silk, her powdered hair and high-backed comb. She recited "Grandma at the Masquerade," by Cora Vandermark. Miss Muir is delightfully at her ease on the platform, a thing, by the way, uncommon among amateurs. Howells' "Mouse Trap" makes an audience forget cares, their neighbors, even the weather; they were only conscious of the fact that mice exist and that women are afraid of them. This little farce was delightfully funny, as it was presented by R. H. Manly, Marie Pollard, Jesse Spurr, Phoebe Berard, Annie Stewart, Alberta Spurr and Jean Tuttle. The most commendable feature of the work done by these students of dramatic art is its freedom from any "staginess." Robert Manly sauntered around with his hands in his trousers' pockets, just as we see him every day in the hall. An audience has no terrors for him. The death-bed scene of Dr. McClure in the "Bonny Briar Bush" was read by Hugh Walker. Mr. Walker is himself a "bonny Scotch laddie" and entered heartily into the spirit of his theme. The program closed with another farce, "The Fatal Message," by Bangs. This was a "take-off" on amateurs and their trials and tribulations were well portrayed.

R. H. Manly, Josephine Lottridge,

Henry Nienhels, J. N. Shreve, G. E. Hager, Sadie Smith, Evalina Rolofson and Jean Tuttle were in the cast. Robert Manly played the part of Mr. Perkins, who resists the inroads of the Thespians, but Mrs. Perkins—Miss Lottridge—was an enthusiast and his objections were speedily overruled. There is really considerable dramatic talent in the university and we are glad to see it cultivated.

You will be sorry to know that Mr. G. P. Faucon is going back to Boston to live. He is the kind of man that makes warm friends and keeps them. His culture is of the Boston variety, which, though it has been ridiculed, is genuine and modest. His friends will miss him very much and they wish him the very best of fortune.
