

AFTERWARD.

I had so fierce a sickness I believed,
That with the fever life would surely go.
My dread disease was love;
I loved you so
That even in my happiness I grieved;
With you away I feared
I was deceived,
And futile tears would gather up and flow.
No peace was mine,
no comfort could I know,
Till your return my baseless fears relieved.

Tis over now, the fire has burned away,
The fuel passed in smoke and crimson flame.
I am no longer sad,
but bright and gay;
I live such fiery passion to defame,
And as I see you now it seems untrue
That once I loved so frail a thing as you.
—Isabel Richey.

"I don't like your slipper ma."
"That's strange, I thought it hit you just right."

1. Prof. Booker—Ah, there's nothing like a coal oil lamp for reading. You can carry it anywhere and read anywhere.

2. But not—

3. when banana peelings have been dropped on the floor.

Husband—It's dark in the parlor. I thought Maude was in there with that young photographer.

Wife—They were. He's probably developing a negative.

"Yes, dear, I had to decline him because I knew he could never make me a happy woman."

"Why do you think that?"
"He told me he would never live beyond his income even for my sake."

School Teacher—Give me that apple.
Pupil—Well, I suppose you need it more than I do.

New Yorker—We are having a revival of Julius Caesar.

Philadelphian—Is he dead?

Prof. Taylor, who has spent his summer in Europe gathering pictures of Russia and other countries, is now ready to offer his stereopticon lecture. The Young Woman's Christian Association has secured him for the 24th of this month. This will be his first lecture before starting to other places. Tickets will be on sale soon at the reasonable price of 25 cents. All interested in work for the young women of Lincoln, as well as in views of Russia, are requested to make no other arrangement for that night.

The proposed union between the Woman's and Young Women's Christian Associations is one which is very desirable. They are each working for the good of the young women in Lincoln and by combining forces they can much better study the social problems of the city and be ready to meet their needs. The greatest amount of work with the least machinery is the law of economy and common sense, and with one strong organization the work for young women may become a power in the town, not only in its effect upon the moral character of individuals, but in its bearings upon civic conditions.

A committee consisting of three from each of the associations meets Saturday to draw up a constitution for the federation. The respective boards have unanimously expressed their wish for such a union and it is hoped that all the members will fall in line.

"May I kiss you for your mother?"
"Is that the best you can do?"

Miss Goldstein—Why do you love me?
Young Rakemoff—I wish you wouldn't ask me that; I can't bear to talk about money matters.

Three Opinions:

"The CHICAGO RECORD is a model newspaper in every sense of the word."
Harrisburg (Pa.) Call.

"There is no paper published in America that so nearly approaches the true journalistic ideal as The CHICAGO RECORD."
From "Newspaperdom" (New York).

"I have come to the firm conclusion, after a long test and after a wide comparison with the journals of many cities and countries, that The CHICAGO RECORD comes as near being the ideal daily journal as we are for some time likely to find on these mortal shores."
