Mrs. W. W. Keyser of Omaha spoke in the Universist church Thursday evening on Rembrandt. She was listened to by a small but interested audience. She showed the verisimilitude between the method of Shakspeare and the method of Rembrandt. Although not an artist, technically speaking, Mrs. Keyser has made art a study and writes and speaks of it as appreciatively as a lover of his lady. Mrs. Keyser said that the hazy atmosphere of Holland, Rembrandt had transferred to his canvas, that canvas where all harsh outlines blend in the air about about them. The church was then darkened and lantern views from Rembrandt's works shown. There were several different ages. The dignity of labor and the beauty of old age were brought out. The concentration of light was clearly illustrated. Mrs. Meisener very gracefully introduced Mrs. Keyser whose lecture was first appointed for Wednesday evening, then postponed to Thursday evening on account of the rain. On the Thursday it sprinkled and early evening was black with very threatening clouds. On this account the audience was smaller than it would have been. The ladies hope that Mrs. Keyser will come again when the weather is fairer.

The Junior Sorosis entertained Senior Sorosis at Mrs. Meisener's home on D street yesterday.

Sorosis met April 20th with Mrs. Lambertson. Miss Stoddard kindly took the place of Mrs. Lee for the afternoon, and read an instructive and witty paper on "To and over Ireland." She gave a humorous description of her start, much hindered by masculine help and dwelt on the delights of the ocean trip, only hinting at the discomforts. She gave many amusing anecdotes of her stay in Cork and her visit to Blarney Castle. She dwelt upon the impressions of extreme wealth and extreme poverty evidenced every mile of the way in rides through the country. In Dublin she visited St. Patrick's and Shandon Cathedrals, the latter so familiar to all through "The Bell of Shandon." Her sojourn in Belfast was enjoyed, but by far more enjoyable than visits to cities, where hotels and all accommodations were good were her jaunts through the country. She said she could use only superlative adjectives in describing her ride along the Antrim coasts, where low but precipitous hills rise from the bluest water and overlook inland the greenest plains. Every member of Sorosis feels personally indebted to Miss Stoddard for the pleasure she gave. The club will meet with Mrs. Hartley May 4th. Mrs. Lambertson will lead, her subject being "Rise of Banking Systems."
