FRANCES RECTOR.
 These young ladies have kept a careful record of their benefactions and business meetings. The secretary's book faithfully records the doings of their unpretentious mission. The members have gone about their work not in the self-conscious spirit of "elumm-ing," but to learn the bitterness of the poorest and to help with humility as they had opportunity. Their flushed cheeks, tearful eyes and timid, tender words have warmed hearts that, "old cross" and coal could not thaw. That they have not allowed criticism or waning enthusiasm to interfere with their plan of work speaks well for the earnestness of their purpose.

Sorosis met May 4th with Mrs. McGahey. Mrs. Lambertson read a well prepared paper on The Rise of the Banking System. She told of the origin, function and utility of banks after which she described the workings of the great banks of Europe particularly the banks of England and the banks of Scotland, the latter probably nearer perfection than any other European bank. The balance of her paper was devoted to a history of banks in the United States. She spoke particularly of the bank of Philadelphia established in 1790, and of Jackson's conflict with the banks. This part of her paper called forth some discussion. She named the banks in operation now—private savings, state, national and told of the nature of their organization, their advantage and defects and read reports of Mr. Carlisle and Mr. Eckels which suggested remedies for the latter. The club will meet with Mrs. Miller 1849 C street, May 18th. Mrs. Maule will read a paper on "Our Foreign Relations."
