

keeping up with studies and keeping abreast of the times. Mrs. Teresa Carey is the president. The program was a good one, English history and literature being thoroughly studied. Papers and extracts from the best authors, musical selections and recitations made meetings of much interest and benefit. The annual picnic is yet in the future and much enjoyment is expected from this holiday.

Another club at Seward that attracts much attention is one composed entirely of young ladies. It is the Fin de Siecle club. About twenty bright and intelligent young ladies meet and study Roman history. The program covered this year would do credit to a college course. It began with the early Roman kingdom, its inhabitants, the legendary history and the like and ended with the decline and fall of the mighty empire. Two evenings were given to Julius Caesar during the year. Several social meetings were held, at which many other than club members were present. Miss Alice Sexton is the presiding officer.

The town of Crete has several clubs that are doing a good work. One of the oldest is the Round Table. An excellent program of history, literature and art has been carried out. No one country has received the attention of the members, but all countries where interest was to be found was studied. It is a small club and meets at the home of the members. Refreshments were served at the meetings and many times the husbands of the members were present to have a good time. This club and the city federation gave one of the most enjoyable banquets of the year during the winter at which over two hundred guests were seated in the opera house. Mrs. F. I. Foss is the presiding officer of the club.

The town of Fullerton has a fine club called the Mary Barnes Literary club. Mrs. E. M. LaGrange is the president. The yearly program did not consist of studies, but simply of recitations, music and entertaining things. The club seems more for social and recreational purposes and the program was admirably suited for such purposes. It is a flourishing club and the meetings of the year have all been well attended and highly enjoyable.

The Schuyler Woman's club has elected the following officers to guide it through the coming year: President, Mrs. Mary W. Burket; first vice president, Mrs. Anna A. Wells; second vice president, Mrs. Ellen D. E. Faber; treasurer, Mrs. Alice Souter; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Lydia M. Walker. The annual meeting was held in the parlors of the Methodist church. Embellishments of lavender and cream, the colors of the club, were every where and many pretty flowers made the room bright and filled the air with fragrance. To add to all the other enjoyment dainty tables were spread with dainty things to eat and the members enjoyed a luncheon with their conversation.

The third annual banquet of the Stromsburg Woman's club was held May 21. It was made public and was largely attended. The program was held in the opera house. Mrs. A. W. Field of Lincoln was present and made an eloquent and womanly address that was highly appreciated. Among the other good things was a recitation "Mary Queen of Scots" with tableau illustrations. The ghost scene from Hamlet was presented by several ladies in a pretty manner. Ida Makeever recited an original poem of much beauty entitled "A Dream of Home." After the program the guests repaired to the Masonic hall where tables had been set for the banquet. A menu of excellent quality, toasts and witty conversation made the stay there enjoyable. Later, those who cared for the dance returned to the opera house, where the chairs had been removed and to the sound of light music a gay company tripped through the hours. Those privileged to be present report an excellent good time, in fact it was one of the sweetest social events of the year in the city.

The Omaha club is of course the largest club in the state. It is so large that it is a little unwieldy but being well organized into departments it seems like several clubs in a federation. Over five hundred names grace the club roster, many having been added during the year past. A club house is one of the things the club is looking forward to, and a corporation has been formed and chartered for the purpose of working for a permanent home where the women of the state may meet when they go to Omaha.

The regular public meetings for the year have been under the departments of household economics, Mrs. M. M. Pugh, leader; English literature, Miss Jessie Zoller, leader; art, Mrs. Jennie E. Keyser, leader; current topics, Mary L. Creigh, leader; current literature, Belle T. Cartwright, leader; education, Grace B. Sudborough, leader; music, Mary R. Cunningham, leader; political economy, Frances M. Ford, leader; parliamentary practice, Blanche L. McKelvy, leader; French history, Susanne Walker, leader; psychology and mental science, Mary G. Andrews, leader. The program for the year has been heavy, but there have been held many musical and other lighter entertainments to vary the monotony. Lillian R. Harford, who so ably looked after the interests of the club after Mrs. Elia Peattie removed to Chicago, was re-elected at the annual meeting held during May.

The best kind of an illustration for advertising shows just one thing and shows it plainly and unmistakably. The trouble with most ad illustrations is that they half show a lot of things and wholly show nothing. But to know what is the important thing to show—there's the rub.

When Buffalo Bill was in Boston a fortnight ago he had a good time of it socially as well as professionally. The society columns of the Boston papers record that although in New York the fossils of the Union Club turned the cold shoulder to him, in Boston some of Col. Cody's influential friends, who had met him in England, took extra care that he should be appreciated and honored. He was put up at the Somerset Club and given a dinner by Mrs. Paul Thorndike, a daughter of General Sherman, and a luncheon by Mrs. William Hooper, at which her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Perkins, were present.
