

All the well known works on these writers are found in the library.

The rooms were prettily decorated with palms and flags, and many cut flowers, the gifts of friends of the institution. The managers were well repaid for their labor by the pleasure of the children, who thronged the broad room after school hours, sitting on the floor to read the attractive books arranged for them, or gazing with delight on the many colored pictures on the walls. This was intended as the first of a series of such days.

The program of the Matinee Musicale, to be given on Monday afternoon in the club room, consists of variations, etudes and serenades as follows:

- Current Events.....
 Mrs. E. Lewis Baker and Mrs. D. A. Campbell.
 Talk..... Music in Germany
 Mrs. A. S. Raymond.
 "Wake Not, But Hear Me, Love".....

 Accompanist, Miss Give's.

The New Book Review met with Mrs. I. N. Baker on Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Elias Baker gave a sketch of Mr. James Whitcomb Riley. Knowing he was so soon to be in Lincoln, it was interesting to hear of all the paths of his life that have finally led to poetry. Music on the guitar by Miss Clark varied the program. Poems from the author were read by Mrs. Khaelander and Mrs. Stonebraker. Miss Edna Baker sang very sweetly "They Have Broken Your Doll, Little Girl." Miss Holland recited the "Hoocha" and "Do They Miss Me At Home," with banjo accompaniment by Miss Clark. Adjourned to meet with Miss Erb, November 10.

THE THEATRE.

tion here the cast that has been winning so much favor in the play will take part. The play is in three acts and all of its scenes are laid in New York. Chief among the dramatic personae is Elisha Cunningham, who has grown wealthy in Wall street. Cunningham is a shrewd operator who went into New York with hardly a shoe string and he is now the possessor of a million. A deal in wheat having turned out well the broker goes to Europe with his daughter, Marjorie, and returns to discover that his nervous, impressionable partner has gone into a deal to corner the stock of a small railroad. A big operator has tipped him that the road is shortly to be consolidated with a powerful rival which, of course will immensely increase the value of the stock of the smaller road and its holders are enabled to win out a fortune. When Cunningham learns of this state of affairs his firm is on the verge of failure and he is compelled to put his shoulder to the wheel and endeavor to stem the tide. But through the treachery of the big operator he is shorn of all his money. The year that follows is a tough one for the broker, and when he is again seen he is but a shadow of his old self. Seedy in appearance, broken in health and a frequent visitor to the bar rooms, he roams about the stock market feverishly waiting and praying for a turn of luck. Through the fidelity of an old suitor for the hand of his daughter he is placed in possession of a block of stock and through its manipulation he is again brought back to riches and is enabled to carry down in his success the man who was responsible for his ruin. His victory complete, he sits down at a desk and drops off apparently to sleep. In reality he is dead. The comedy element is furnished by the love affairs of a French count. In the presentation Mr. Crane will be Mr. Cunningham, a character in which he does the best work of his career. Seats on sale Saturday at 9 a. m., at box office. Prices, $1.50, $1, 75, 50 and 25 cents.

W. A. Tremayne has written a new play called "A Secret Warrant" which will be presented by Robert Mantell at the Lansing theatre next Thursday, November 4. The romance is exciting and savors of the Dumas school. Love and rapiers dash through it. Heroism and chivalry meet intrigue and treachery. It is a war of right against might, of virtue against regal power. Louis de Beaumont is a splendid fellow of the D'Aragnan type and it is not surprising that more than one lady falls in love with him. He, however, favors only the ingenuous daughter of Bertrand, the goldsmith. He has no time for the demi-monde of the Court and does not appreciate the love of the Lady Gabrielle, especially as she already holds the position of mistress to the Regent. Of course it is unwise to thwart the wishes of a Court favorite who can secure a lettre de cachet for the asking, but Louis takes his chance and with the Bastille staring him in the face, tells the vexed beauty to go to the Tropics. The production is under the management of M. W. Hanley, who never fails to do things well and thoroughly. Seats on sale Tuesday at 7 a. m. Prices, $1, 75, 50 and 25 cents.

Manager Zehring has booked as a special engagement Litz & Davis' big scenic production of H. Rider Haggard's oriental romance, "She." The dramatization of "She" is by Mr. Edwin Barbour, author of the "Legal Document." The story as told by Haggard is developed in every particular, and the strange characters of fiction, are depicted in real life. Haggard's story opens in the nineteenth century, while Mr. Barbour goes beyond and opens his play 440 years before Christ, giving to the public the characters in life that Haggard mentioned as mythical. The mechanical effects are startling—showing a real live person slipping into a roaring volcanic flame, and in an instant, before the very eyes, he is shrivelled into a mummy. The scenery used in the play is the handsomest ever painted for a production of this kind, and covers some 16,000 feet of canvas. The company, numbering twenty-five people, are picked from the best ranks of the profession and are selected for their ability to portray the characters for which they are cast. The play has an abundance of comedy that keeps the audience in good humor throughout. At the Funke Friday and Saturday nights and bargain matinee November 5 and 6. Prices, $1, 75, 50 and 25 cents. Seats on sale Thursday at 10 a. m.
