The Fortnightly of this city met with Mrs. Barbour Friday, October 21, and listened to an able address by Mrs. A. W. Field on the history of the Russian government.

THE THEATRE

It is was a pity that the storm of Monday night prevented so many of Lincoln's music lovers from attending the concert given at the Oliver by Miss Louise Brehany and her company for the program was both interesting and enjoyable. Mr. Sauvlet, the pianist, was more technical than musical in his performance. His skill in the manipulation of the keys is quite remarkable, but there is lack of the spirit. His accompaniments were well played except that in some instances the piano was too strong for the voices. Miss Pringle, the violinist, is a talented young girl who makes the mistake of resorting to tricks and maneuvering to capture her audience; she won an encore and responded by playing the "Intermezzo" from Cavalleria Rusticana. Mr. Dethlefs has many friends in Lincoln who are always glad of an opportunity to hear him sing. On this occasion he was evidently embarrassed and his stage presence was not pleasing, but his voice is good, very good, and his vocal efforts were thoroughly appreciated and the "Son of the Desert," which he sang as an encore, was given with power and feeling. Miss Brehany was a pleasant surprise to those who had not heard her. She is pretty, sweet and modest in appearance, is the possessor of a pure full voice which easily carried to the farthest corner of the room. She has it well under control. Her Aria from Il'Guarny so pleased the audience that she was obliged to respond to a double encore. Miss Jessie Waters sang the well known "Bel Rag gio" so pleasingly that she was recalled and sang "The Summer Girl." The tenor, Mr. Ab'ill, gave one a tight feeling in the throat caused doubtless by the apparent effort on his part to produce a big tone when his vocal organs are capable only of something less. He was more pleasing in the act from Martha than in the duet with Mr. Dethlefs. One act from an opera is never satisfying and I wonder why all companies who want to give an operatic part choose this particular thing from Martha; however, Lincoln has had a dearth of opera and the audience enjoyed this treat.

The pleasure of doing good is an expenditure that will bring its own reward, for what pleasure can be greater than to know that somewhere a ray of sunshine has been flashed into a sad, sorrowing heart? That is the mission that "Ole Olson" is performing this season, throwing search light flashes of wit and humor as an antidote for the blues, with the result that it fills theatres everywhere with audiences loud in praises of the sumptuous surroundings given the revival. The comedy has never been interpreted by as clever a company as now, and the specialties are exceptionally meritorious. "Ole" will welcome old and new friends at the Oliver Theatre next Friday evening, November 4th.
