THE STORM. THE RAW WINDS.

Will not be noticed by you if you wear one of our Chamois Skin Lined Chest Protectors. Just the thing these cold days to protect you from a cold body, colds, coughs, sore throats, hoarseness or lung troubles. Those who have worn them say that they are so comfortable and that they derive so much benefit from them, that they would not think of doing without one. We have chest protectors in all sizes and kinds. Some expensive ones and some at very moderate prices; but all good; made from the very best material and everyone guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction. If you have never worn a chest protector we would urge you to do so at once. It is much better than being compelled to doctor yourself the entire winter. REMEMBER, all sizes, all prices.

Social and Personal

The grip and a blast from the regions of the north pole are responsible for a quietness in society this week that almost amounted to a complete stillness. It has been too cold to leave the house as a general thing and people have remained by the side of their grates and enjoyed the company of their own families. Last week at the very end there were a few parties to liven a week of dullness. Saturday afternoon Mrs. C. J. Roman entertained a few friends in honor of Miss Hilma Gustafson. Miss Gustafson received many presents in memento of the occasion. The guests were: Mesdames Christensen, Hedlund, Palm, Elmen, C. P. and Chas. Olson, A. and F. Anderson; Misses Sundean and Palm. Mrs. A. L. Lathrop entertained Friday night for her guests, Mesdames Dr. Gretbeart and W. L. Percell of San Francisco. The guests were Mesdames Gretbeart, Percell; Messrs and Mesdames Dye, Anderson, Swamp, Claton and Church. Miss Laura Easterday gave a Kensington Saturday afternoon which was very enjoyable. Good music was one of the amusements of the afternoon. Those present were: Mesdames Van Wie, Scott, Hall, Golden, Platt, Leinberger, Finney, Stevens, Peters, Wilson, Kelly, Guild, H. J. and Chas. Whitmore, A. W. and L. F. Easterday; Misses Peters and Redford. The guests at the party given Friday night by Messrs Diedrich and Alex Lau to the members of Phi Delta Theta and friends, mention of which was made in these columns last week were: Misses Avery, Webster, Junge, Hill, Welch, Cole, Macfarland, Outcalt, Tukey, Hargreaves, Wilson, Thomas, Prentice, Jaynes, Johnson, Jackson, Garten, Fuller, Cunningham, Millar, Cochran, Raymond and Macomber; Messrs T. and C. Sumner, Abbott, Tukey, Lyman, L. and I. Raymond, Sherman, D., P. and A. Lau, McCreery, Hastie, Pryce, Stebbins, Mansfelde, Roddy, Hill, Haggard, Whitman, Walsh, Honeywell, Dr. White.

Mrs. Ellery W. Davis and Mrs. James T. Lees entertained on Thursday and Friday of this week. Both afternoons were unique in the manner of amusement and being out of the ordinary the guests enjoyed the added zest of novelty and curiosity. Mrs. Davis entertained at her home on Thursday. The rooms were bright with carnations and smilax in the parlors, and in the dining room the decorations were stately calla lillies, white and pure. The invitations sent out asked each lady to wear some insignia whereby her tad might be guessed out, and the badges were numerous and very odd in some instances. The afternoon was spent in inspecting the badges and guessing what they meant. Mrs. Barbour received the first prize and Mrs. Ansley the second. After the guessing was over refreshments were served. Salads and daintily prepared sandwiches with attendant dishes were served first, and afterward cake and coffee. Mrs. Davis and Mrs. Lees were assisted in receiving the guests by Mesdames George E. MacLean, Le Gore and Stevens. There were over one hundred invitations sent out and very few regrets were received. The afternoon was thoroughly enjoyed by all present, the hostesses doing all in their power to make each guest have a good time. Friday afternoon Mrs. Lees was assisted by Mesdames MacLean, Fling, I. C. Jones, R. A. Holyoke. The rooms were simply decorated with potted palms, cut flowers and a bunch of great calla lillies. The guests wore some costume or badge to represent the title of a book and there was great amusement in the endeavor to see who could guess the most titles. Prizes were awarded, books being given. The first prize was "The World Beautiful," by Lillian Whiting, and the second was a little book called "The Silly Jelly Fish." Light refreshments were served during the afternoon. The guests Friday afternoon were Mesdames MacLean, Fling, I. C. Jones, R. A. Holyoke, H. H. Wheeler, White, Mitchell, W. Q. Bell, Hellwig, Lambertsos, D. A. Campbell, Simmons, Summers, Meisner, Sawyer, Hall, Burlingim, Miller, Aitken, Philbrick, Wells, Bryan, Campbell, Rector, Snell, Harley, Menzendorf, Gere, Garten, Welch, Turner, Jones, Blish, Webster, Winger, Holm, Hyde, F. E. Campbell, Myron Wheeler, Spencer, Hill, Evarts, Wade, McGahay, Casebeer, Chapin, Tipling, Gleesor, Munger, Holyoke, Baird, Warren, Swan, Lowrie, Billmeyer, Barr, Grainger, Chandler, Phillips, Simpkins, Piper, Nicholson, Edgren, Fossler, Fling, Richards, Dann, Hastings, Moore, Peterson, Wolcott, Bennett, Wyer, Franklin, Manahan, Wilson, Wendt, Lowrie and Misses Miller, Barr, Campbell, Tibbetts, Erwin, Furst, Conde, Homan, Pound, Elen Smith, Bouton, Fennelly and Bowerman.

Mr. Geo. Childers is home from New York where he had a fine time. He says that he attended every play that amounted to anything while he was there but was most impressed with "Zaza," the play in which Mrs. Leslie Carter is starring. Standing room only was obtainable, but the excitement of the play was so great that those standing forgot to be fatigued. Mr. Childers says the excitement was indescribable. Women stood in their seats and cried out and some of them threw flowers on the stage. Mr. Childers attended a bohemian party given by the members of Nat Goodwin's company while he was in the metropolis. It was a most enjoyable affair, the utter informality and the uniqueness of it making it refreshing. While walking down the street Mr. Childers met a Lincoln young man who seemed overjoyed to meet a man from his home town. The young man was Jas. P. Hayden, son of the late Kent K. Hayden. He is living with his mother near 31st and Broadway and thinks of remaining in the metropolis for some time.

The flower of the social world in the university is always the "Junior Prom," as it is called in the abbreviated mode of the student. This event is par excellence the event of the season and the promenade last night at the Lincoln hotel was a bright and beautiful gathering. The dining room was adorned with bunting and palms and the innumerable flashing lights, the soft seductive music and above all the whirl of pretty girls in handsome gowns and the brightest of the young men of the university made a scene wholesome and good to look upon. Miss Willoughby's orchestra made the music and it was of the best. The guests were from the university and there were many of them. Louis Kors
